New Ways to Light Your Living

by Ruth W. Lee,
home-furnishings
consultant

AWARENESS of the role light plays on our emotions has led to a revolution in home illumination. Ceiling fixtures are no longer "just there" to give glaring, over-all light. New fixture designs have originality and imagination. Pulleys and other features, integral to the design of these fixtures, make them adjustable in height; raised, they give general room illumination; lowered, they are for such special uses as dining, reading, or sewing. Plastic and metal shields diffuse the light for comfort and softness. The variety of designs in these adjustable fixtures makes possible smart and functional lighting for all home activities.

"umphwog glymp nifto bwosh!" I finished as a pillow caught me in the face.

Along about noon—or maybe it was only 10 minutes later and seemed like noon—they tired of the sport and tailed out. Weakened by the ordeal, I readjusted the bedcovers and sank back into lovely oblivion. I was just telling Brigitte Bardot to stop whining, that I would kiss her when the mood moved me, when my wife burst in to the bedroom.

"Here we are!" she sang out, "Food for the invalid."

"Well, that's more like it!" I exclaimed, sitting up to receive the tray. "There seems to have been a misunderstanding about the order, however," I said sadly, looking at the unbuttered toast and plain tea. "How can I hope to survive if my tired red corpuscles are not given strength enough to beat down the white ones?"

"Until we find out what you have, it'll be toast and tea," my wife sang out. "They may have to operate, you know."

"Did you call the doctor?" I asked.

"Yep. He's pretty busy but he said he'd try to stop by after supper."

"After supper!" I exploded.

"Oh, and another thing," my bride added. "The painters are due this morning and we'll have to move you to the basement."

"Now hold on!" I shouted. "Here I am on the edge of oblivion and you—"

"Your office said to take care of yourself and not worry about a thing. They can give that Johnson matter, which carries the heavy bonus, to one of the other—"

I leaped from bed. "Gangway!" I yelled. "Keep small children and other low-lying objects back against the walls! I'm going downtown!"

I thought I noticed a trace of pride in my wife's smile as I raced out the front door, but I wasn't sure. It also looked like triumph.
