

HALLWAYS TEST DECORATING ABILITY — Working out a handsome hallway is a good way to test your decorating ability. Halls are used just as much as any other element of a home, thus logically should be just as pleasingly finished. Here, a clever homemaker brought the house siding of tongue-and-groove western red cedar inside to warm the hall. Doors have been painted clear turquoise to contrast with the cedar's ruddy hue, and she has utilized a Japanese print, an Oriental chest, and a low coffee table to break the hall's length.

JEWEL-LIKE DINING AREA — Size is no excuse for stark design. A miniature dining area can be just as gracious as a full-blown banquet room. In this tiny nook between living room and kitchen, simplicity of design and furnishing has been coupled with the elegance of west coast hemlock wall paneling to make dining a memorable event. A built-in buffet, which doubles as a divider wall, makes table setting easy.

Matter of FACT

Silver is one of the most widely distributed of all metals. Some investigators think that about 2,000,000 tons of it floats about in the sea, but it would not pay to get it out. Once, in the mines at Kongsberg, Norway, a piece of solid silver weighing three-quarters of a ton was found. In the main, however, silver comes only in ores from which it must be separated.

This Teener Likes Planes

MAPLEWOOD, N. J. (UPI) — young Linda Dale Jones has been going "steady" with airplanes for four years—long before she was permitted to use the family car for dates with boys.

The pretty 19-year-old casually pocketed her private pilot's license at the age of 15 and since has flown more than 6,000 miles. Three years later, almost as an afterthought, she picked up her automobile driver's license.

"I decided to be a pilot before I had been anywhere near a plane," she said.

The teen-ager, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Raymond Jones, regularly uses a rented Piper Cub at the Morristown Municipal Airport. A few months ago, she made a 400-mile round trip solo flight between Morristown and New Bedford, Mass.

"It was no trouble at all," she recalled blithely.

Her parents think differently, but make no real objections. "I think she's a wee bit insane," laughed her father, a New York sales executive.
