GI Writing
Learned Book
On The Mambo

STUTT GART, Germany—(UPD) An American soldier here is writing a book which he hopes will be a definitive work—on mambo.

Specialist Robert F. Thompson, 25, of El Paso, Tex., began his research on the subject during his senior year at Yale and hopes to have his work—"The Story of Mambo"—completed next year.

In a hurry to finish the book before someone with more time on his hands beats him to it, Thompson, who is stationed with the 7th Army in Stuttgart, spends two to three off-duty hours daily in search of facts, figures and people to prove his point "that mambo, like the charleston in the 1920's, is the music of our generation."

"There isn't a book existing that covers mambo," he said. "I suppose this is because the material is so scattered. I've been collecting the material for seven years now."

The Texan first became interested in the mambo when it was introduced in New York in 1950.

"Since then it has become my second life, if not my first. I waited four years to see if anyone was going to put the idea of mambo into book form—and when no one did I decided I must."

Being in the Army, Thompson said, has been a great help in his search for information.

"I have had opportunity to speak with Puerto Rican sergeants who played the bongos in Korean bunkers, musicians who have played with leading Latin-American dance bands—just anyone who knows anything about music and dancing."
