Arms Issued To Civilians

NICOSIA, Cyprus (UPI) — The Army issued pistols to more than 100 British civilians today for protection against the Greek underground gunmen who have killed 10 unarmed Britons in less than six weeks.

At the same time, the British Air Force announced it has discharged about 3,000 Greek civilian employes as a precaution against a repetition of the bombing that killed two airmen and wounded seven on Saturday.

The bomb had been planted in the upholstery of a couch in a crowded Air Force lounge, and it appeared certain that it was an "inside job."

Arms were issued to the civilians after Gov. Sir Hugh Foot had told them that they are "in the front line" and Gen. Kenneth Darling had warned that "no one should kid himself that 'it can't happen to me.'"

They were warned to keep a sharp lookout for young hoodlums loitering in the streets—like those who shot two British bankers in the back last week.

Shelling Stops On Even Day

TAIPEI (AP) — This was an even-numbered day of the month, a non-shelling day for the Quemoys in the Communists' calendar of warfare. For the fifth consecutive even-numbered day the Reds stuck to the calendar, not even bombarding areas outside the Nationalist Chinese islands' supply beaches and airstrip.

Even Sunday, an odd-numbered day, the Reds were almost asleep at their guns. They fired only 568 shells at the Quemoys.
