The Alturas Health and Welfare Society is associated with the district adventist whose headquarters are in Paradise, California. There are 94 such groups operating in Northern California whose total contribution of 132,086 hours of labor was consumed in dispersing 198,350 articles of clothing and other materials to needy persons.

Medical aid, food and cash brought the total value of relief work by the churches in Northern California to $618,334.24, according to Elder E. C. Retzer, health and welfare director for Seventh-day Adventist work in Northern California.

Most recent aid in the Alturas district was five boxes of clothing and several pieces of furniture to a family whose home was destroyed by fire. In these distributions, there is no restriction because of creed, race or color, but those in need are helped.

Toiling Mom Often Better Than One Who Stays Home

By DOROTHY ROE
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The working mother need have no feelings of guilt toward her children — she's often a better mother than the one who stays home all day.

This is the opinion of Margit Fellegi, one of the world's busiest women. She has been designing bathing suits for 23 years while raising four children and being a proud and devoted wife to the late Aladar Laslo, well-known writer who died six weeks ago.

"I believe with all my heart that the woman who is busy and active has more to give her children than the mother who limits her horizons to the four walls of her home. She is able to inspire them with more ideas, to offer more stimulating companionship," Margit says.

Margit's children are Peter, 16, a freshman at California Institute of Technology; Vicki, 15, a student at Beverly High School who often models her mother's swim suits; Winston, 13; and Larry, 10.

I talked with this designer on the opening day of the week of press showings by California fashion creators. Her designs for this year include some daring Bikini suits, many light-hearted Bangkok styles and everywhere high colors in Hong Kong.

When it is 12 o'clock noon in New York City, it is 1 o'clock in the morning of the following day in Hong Kong.

Progress in the forest industry has a definite effect on the economy of the Pacific Northwest. More jobs are created as new plants are built to manufacture new products.

Introduction of Silvatek Versabord is a good example. It resulted from Weyerhaeuser developments in refining an existing particle board process and adapting it to Oregon and Washington tree species. This relatively new Weyerhaeuser product required construction of a plant at Coos Bay, Oregon and employment of a number of local people.

Weyerhaeuser scientists, technicians and market specialists constantly search for new and useful products to manufacture. As such products are introduced, they also will bring about more employment and addition of new plant facilities.

The resulting payrolls and capital expenditures boost local business volume and lend support to local government through taxes...adding stability to our regional economy.
