Prof Writes Corset Story
 ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI)—If you'd like to know how a foundation garment can help you to your share of admiring glances, send for a Cornell Extension Bulletin, "Posture and Foundation Garments."
 Janet Reed, the author, is a professor in the textiles and clothing department of New York State College of Home Economics at Cornell. She said:
 "A woman of any age can have an attractive, well-proportioned figure if she has good posture, adequate exercise, follows a sensible diet, and wears properly fitted foundation garments."
 "Even the lightest of foundation garments serves as a reminder to stand tall, and therefore helps maintain good posture. As muscles sag, and muscle tone of the body is lost, a firmer support may be needed."
