

Fire Laddies Chagrined

NEW YORK (AP)—In a demonstration of how to catch false alarm offenders with black light, the city fire commissioner ended up with a green hand and a red face.

Commissioner Edward F. Cavanagh gave the demonstration at a fire alarm box in the Bronx. The box was treated with a fluorescent paste that glows with an eerie green color under so-called black-ultra-violet-light.

Cavanagh was to pull the handle and firemen were to shine the black light from a portable device to show how an offender could be spotted quickly. Arrangements had been made to cancel the alarm before it reached firemen in the trucks.

Cavanagh pulled the handle. Sirens screamed.

An engine company raced to the scene. Then another and another. They were joined by two fire trucks, a rescue squad, two battalion chiefs and a deputy chief.

"What the hell's going on?" yelled Fire Chief Thomas P. O'Brien, in charge of the department's communications.

He found out the alarm had gone through.

"Anyhow," said O'Brien, "it shows how fast our firemen respond to an alarm."
