Cattlemen's Association Hear Bay Area Beef Chief

YREKA — Walter T. Rodman, San Francisco, manager of the California Beef Council, spoke on the promotion for the marketing of beef before 130 members and guests of the Siskiyou County Cattlemen's Association annual dinner recently.

Rodman said the main contributors to the Beef Council at the present time are beef producers, but he added "I wouldn't be surprised if more money would be contributed by other industries besides the cattlemen."

He stated that one nationally known salt company offered a contribution of $50,000, if the Beef Council would put in $5,000, toward the printing of recipes suggesting the use of their particular brand of salt. He also said many other industries, such as vegetable producers, have shown interest in the program.

Rodman advocates the use of printed recipes in newspapers and periodicals and displays in stores near the meat counters. He also believes the Cow Belles promotion of cookbooks using beef is a big help to the industry.

One of Rodman's suggestions was to use vauses instead of trophy cups for prize winning awards in promoting the use of beef hides. He also displayed a banner and rosette made from leather.

Rodman said that the "basis of the Beef Council is the promotion to sell the product," and that the council had enough money to continue development of the program, operating on a $173,000 budget this fiscal year.

Rodman was introduced by Ed Foulke of Gazelle, a member of the council. Ed Hart of Montague, president of the Siskiyou Cattlemen's Association, introduced the board of directors of the association. Malcom Hayden, Fort Jones; Louie Hessig, Beswick; Gene Selby, Greenview; "Jiggs" Kuck, Montague; and Del Britte, Gazelle; Blair Smith of Callahan, state

N.Y. Community Stirred Up By Homicide

Editor's Note: Recently a business executive shot to death a union organizer who had been causing trouble at his unionized plant. The executive is in jail awaiting legal action. UPI sent James L. Kilgallen, who has covered many major crime stories in his long career as a reporter, to the scene to bring this incident up to date. His dispatch follows.

CHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — This community of 3,000 population is greatly stirred up by an unusual homicide — the shooting to death of a union organizer by a factory president plagued by union trouble.

In jail in nearby Goshen, awaiting possible grand jury action, is Malcolm R. White, 48, mild-appearing head of Chester Cable Corp., which manufactures cable and electrical wiring. The man he killed was Alfred Dugan, 52, a dapper footballer who had been trying to dislodge one union with White's plant and substitute his own local.

"It was justifiable homicide," said Henry Hirschberg, newly-appointed counsel for White. "The defendant is not in the criminal class. He is a man who led a good life and got involved in an unfortunate episode. He had never committed a crime. He tells me he was in terror of Dugan. He says he knew Dugan had a criminal record."

The paths of White and Dugan crossed half a mile from White's picketed plant at about 8:20 a.m., November 13, White claims, according to Hirschberg, that as Dugan came toward White he had his hand in his pocket and that White thought the man was going to attack him. White "wanted to protect himself," said

Hirschberg. White emptied his .32-caliber automatic into Dugan. Hirschberg's first move in White's defense was to request an open public hearing for White. In letters to Magistrate Peter B. Bush and Orange County District Attorney Abraham S. Isaacs, he urged such a hearing as soon as possible, preferably next week.

The grand jury has not yet acted in the case. If Hirschberg's move fails, he said he will then have to wait and see whether the grand jury returns an indictment against White—or not.

Hirschberg said today that the defendant would not claim duress. The attorney pointed out that White willingly gave himself up.

If White is brought to trial for the killing of Dugan, his defense would contend it was a case of justifiable homicide and that White is entitled to acquittal.

Hirschberg is a colorful attorney and well known in this region. He is 79 years old and is a veteran of almost 100 murder cases in which he acted as either prosecutor or counsel for the defense. He was once an attorney for Harry K. Thaw.

"I think White should be freed," said Hirschberg. "I am not working for a plea of less than first degree murder. I want him out of jail a free man."

Mrs. Eleanor White, the defendant's wife, has visited her husband in the Goshen jail several times since his arrest. She is White's second wife. White has three children, two by his first wife and one by his present wife. White was reported to be holding up pretty well in jail but, according to Hirschberg, he sometimes becomes depressed.
