Seems like the next war will be fought over disarmament.—Australasian Mjgr.

THE PROBLEMS OF INNER SPACE

Our new refrigerator's huge. A great big super-cold one; We've had it now a week, and It's as crowded as the old one.

—Ken Kraft

Crime of My Wife

Of all the stupid questions, The one that takes the cake Is this: "Say, honey . . .

Francis . . . "HEY, DEAR, ARE YOU AWAKE!"

—Francis O. Walsh

"Did you ever see such coordination at six months?"

One fellow who's sure to get a kick out of his work is the salesman in the children's shoe department.

—Pat Kraft

A congressman facing a tough battle for re-election stumped the district in a series of talks with his worthy opponent. An old-time spellbinder, the congressman had no intention of losing his cush job and pulled out all the stops in trying to convince his constituents that he should be returned to Washington.

"My friends," he said imploringly, "I pondered long the question—should I retire after so many years of selfless service or should I once again seek the honor of representing you people in the nation's capital? One day I went to Statuary Hall where the great marble busts of our past heroes stand. I paused in front of the statue of Thomas Jefferson and put to him the same question—should I retire; should I continue my career? And, friends, I could almost see his lips move and hear his voice come clear—'Stay here,' it said."

His opponent got up and delivered a brief rebuttal. "Say, you better elect me. You don't want a fellow who goes around mumbling to statues!"
