

Patrons Crude, Rude, Lewd Nude Entertainers Claim

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The imported strippers at the Stardust Hotel hide little but their thoughts—and it's a good thing they do.

All 12 of these bare-bosomed beauties are disgusted with American men, and with American women, too.

The men shout obscenities at them. The women giggle so loudly that a few have been asked to leave.

These girls, members of the Lido Club troupe from Paris, always regarded themselves as artists—until they played Las Vegas. Now, after seven months of indignities, they feel cheapened. At least one of them plans to quit.

When the girls first came here, they thought Las Vegas would be a wonderful place to meet American millionaires. Some of them did—to their shame and sorrow. Red-haired Anne Gibson, 20, was introduced to a wealthy American soon after arriving here from London last May.

Did he propose marriage?

"No, he proposed something else," Anne said. "I got up and left the table."

Katinka Bleeker, who used to be a photographers' model in Amsterdam, summed up the troupe's attitude toward American men.

"They are not nice," said the 19-year-old blonde. "I don't like people who like to buy things with money."

The strippers share the spotlight in the show with the Bluebells, a troupe of dancers from England who do not appear on stage uncovered. Some of the Bluebells also have a low opinion of American men.

Complains Bluebell Anke Linschoten, 19, of Amsterdam: All they talk about is their cars and their money.

Linda Evans, 20, who appeared with the show at the Lido in Paris without shame, says, "I don't like showing my busts to these men."

Linda does not plan to stay with the show.

Most of the girls, however, still see nothing wrong with nudity.

"Why shouldn't girls show themselves off to good advantage?" asks Enid Mills, 26, captain of the Bluebells. "Nothing in the show is vulgar. The costumes of the Bluebells themselves are enough to look at, apart from the girls with bare bosoms."

Why, then, are bare bosoms necessary?

"Now that is a difficult question," said Enid. "I think that it's the same thing as looking at an oil painting. Why do they paint naked women? Because a bare bosom is a thing of beauty."

The show has broken all attendance records at the Stardust. Some 1,400 persons leave gambling tables and bars each night to see it.

Matson Sells Hawaii Hotels

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Matson Navigation Company announced today the sale of its four big Honolulu hotels to the Sheraton Corp. of America for 18 million dollars.

The hotels are the Royal Hawaiian, Princess Kaiulani, Moana and Surfrider, all of which are on Waikiki Beach. They have a total of 1,086 rooms.

Matson may exercise its option to conclude the sale at some time after the next four months but within a year.

Matson President Randolph Sevier said that an agreement will be made in the next few weeks for Sheraton to operate the hotels on a management fee basis until the sale is completed.

When the sale is completed, Sevier said, arrangements will be worked out for the transfer of Matson's hotel personnel to the Sheraton organization. About 1,000 workers are involved.

"Consumption of this contract will allow the company to concentrate more fully on its passenger and freight operations to Hawaii and other areas in the Pacific, and increase the opportunity for profit," Sevier said.

People Aid Ruined School

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — People throughout the Western Hemisphere have donated cash and food for an integrated school in nearby Osage that was wrecked by a bomb Nov. 10.

Principal James Twigg said Monday $843 in cash and $405 worth of food for the school's hot lunch program have been received.

The largest single donation, $50 cash, came from a man in Maracaibo, Venezuela. The smallest, 5 cents, was sent by a youngster from Orinda, Calif.

Ten Month Tot Accident Victim

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A 10-month-old baby boy was killed by a broken crib.

Detectives said the child awoke from a nap and apparently reached for toys on the floor. They said a screw missing from a guide rail allowed Mickel Dupuy to wedge his head between the steel frame that supports the mattress and the safety bars.

Peace Justice Glenn Byrd ruled accidental death.
