Safety Council Reviews Not-So-Serious Mishaps

CHICAGO (UPI) — A run-away house... a hot-rodding puppy... and a trigger-happy sun.

They're all included in the National Safety Council's roundup of 1958's odd accidents — the not-so-serious mishaps that brought chuckles to everyone except those involved.

S. H. Burden, Knoxville, Tenn., was moving his house up an incline and roped it to a stump. A minute later he was fleeing for his life. The rope had broken, freeing the house, which clobbered Burden and broke his arm.

When a neighbor's car drove smoothly into William Zaring's front lawn in Indianapolis, Zaring leaped into the car and jammed on the brakes. Then he turned to berate the driver — and found himself to face to face with the neighbor's dog.

On a stifling summer day in Marathon, Tex., hunter Jack Lourie stretched out on his station wagon's mattress for a quick snooze. He was violently awakened when the sun's rays, passing through a gallon bottle of water, set the mattress afire, exploding a box of shotgun shells.

All was calm a minute later, though, when one of the shells smashed the water bottle, dousing the fire.

Another oddity recounted by the Safety Council's magazine, Traffic Safety, included:

—Army Sgt. Joe Palacio snapped to a salute at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., and dislocated his shoulder.

REAL UNUSUAL

SALVERSVILLE, Ky. — Homer Fletcher has no problem in heating and lighting his farm home. He has a gas well eight feet deep on his property that supplies fuel for cooking, light and heat. Oilmen call it unusual.

The word "restaurant" first was used for a Paris eating place established in 1765.

The soybean is the third most valuable food crop in the United States, with corn and wheat being the first two.

In the song, "Coming Through the Rye," Rye refers to a river in Scotland.
