

County Court, Chamber, Seek Recreation Ideas

If you have any ideas about rural areas that would make good recreational developments, the county court would like to hear about them.

So would the chamber of commerce.

This invitation comes from the county court, which Wednesday was asked to participate in an interstate regional recreation inventory.

The State Highway Department, on behalf of the Columbia Basin Inter-Agency Committee, asked the court for ideas "to promote a more orderly development of our recreational resources."

What the department wants is a dual report: (1) existing, and (2) potential non-urban areas of recreational value.

Your ideas, however, must be made known soon. The deadline for the report is December 15, set by the highway department.

The county court, back from meetings in Reno and Carson City, Nevada, also reported that the hoped-for contract to construct a Nevada leg of the Winnemucca-to-the-Sea Highway is very likely to be let soon.

Details are lacking now, but the court was told in Carson City that Nevada fundamentally approved the leg which would join a section already constructed by Lake County, Oregon.

All members of the court — Judge Charlie Mack and Commissioners Jerry Rajnus and Ed Gowen, as well as Commissioner-elect Robert Walker and County Engineer W. R. Canton—attended the Carson City meeting with Nevada highway officials, and the entire county courts from Lake County and Humboldt County, Nevada.

The Carson City meeting was Tuesday. On the previous Saturday Mack and Rajnus attended a Public Lands Committee meeting of the Interstate Association of Public Lands Counties (an 11-state organization) in Reno.

At that time, Mack and Rajnus said, the committee discussed pending national legislation regarding the Wilderness Bill, federal plans to acquire additional game reservations, and allowable percentages from timber sales on federal government lands.

On Friday the court will hear bids from insurance companies hoping to contract with the county for life and health policies affecting county employees. The court said five companies have submitted bids for the dual program, and a sixth has bid for a life insurance program alone.
