

Many Friends Pay Tribute To Defeated Candidate

WASHINGTON (AP)—Even a loser has his moments of triumph. Such a moment came Thursday night for Rep. Brooks Hays (D-Ark). Hays, an avowed moderate on the segregation issue, was unseated last month by Dr. Dale Alford, Little Rock segregationist who ran as a late entry write-in candidate.

In tribute to Hays, about 700 friends and well wishers assembled at a dinner and heard him praised by many national figures. Responding, Hays said the cause of moderation is not hopeless. He called for "an appreciation of what the rule of law means in sustaining our liberties and our property."

Laudatory messages were read from many national figures unable to attend. Included were telegrams from Adlai Stevenson, one of the sponsors of the event; Vice President Richard M. Nixon; Gov. Price Daniel of Texas; and various members of Congress.

Nixon said Hays' "outstanding reputation was enhanced rather than tarnished by defeat."

Among the speakers was evangelist Billy Graham, a member of the Southern Baptist Convention of which Hays is president. Graham said Hays, now completing 16 years in Congress, "has helped lift the word 'politics' out of the mud."

While there were many references to Hays' defeat, there was no mention of Alford, the man who beat him by 1,200 votes.

Alford, however, has no clear path to Hays' seat. A special House committee, by a 3-2 vote, recommended Wednesday that Alford be denied the seat until an investigation is made of charges there were irregularities in the election. The House will decide that matter on Jan. 7.

Many members of Congress came to the Hays dinner, but few were from the South. Among Southerners who attended were Representatives Howard Smith (D-Va.) and Porter Hardy (D-Va.). None of the other Arkansas senators and representatives attended, although Sen. J. W. Fulbright (D) was listed among ticket purchasers and sent a telegram praising Hays as a "fine public servant."

Grocer Death Still Mystery

SEATTLE (AP)—Did David D. McLain, 16, kill a grocer in a robbery at suburban Houghton in 1957 or is his confession just a wild but convincing flight of imagination?

A Ft. Lewis grade school teacher who was formerly an attendant at Western State said McLain was confined at the mental hospital on Oct. 31, 1957, when Norton Gregory was killed while his store was being robbed of $90.

James Wood said Thursday night that records showed McLain was at the hospital on the day of the killing. He vouched for the accuracy of these records.

Wood said he was one of two attendants in charge of a movie party from which McLain escaped Nov. 1.

"I remember the incident perfectly. It was the first kid I ever lost."

Wood labeled as correct three separate hospital records which gave Nov. 1, 1957, as the date on which the boy escaped.

King County Undersheriff Don Sprinkle said lie detector tests given McLain Thursday tended to support at least part of his confession. He said an important new development, which he did not reveal, was also brought out during the tests.

A detective was sent to Tacoma to interview two boys and two girls McLain contends he saw and spoke to on Oct. 28, 1957. This is the date he claims to have escaped from the hospital.

620 Will Die Says Council

CHICAGO (AP)—The National Safety Council today estimated that 620 Americans will be killed in traffic accidents during the four-day Christmas holiday period. The period will begin at 6 p.m. (local time) Wednesday, Dec. 24, and will end at midnight Sunday, Dec. 27.

"Those deaths need not occur and should not occur," the council said.

And it provided this prescription for driving and staying alive:

Start early, cut speed to meet traffic and weather conditions, pull off the road if you feel tired or sleepy.

If you've been drinking, the council added, don't drive.

"DENNIS THE MENACE"

"REMEMBER—THIS ISN'T JUST ANY OL' TREE!"

Publisher, Politico Says He Hates Politics

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—"I abhor politics," says John F. Wells, an Arkansas politician.

Wells, publisher of a Little Rock weekly newspaper, was thrust onto the national political stage when he contested the election of Dr. Dale Alford in Arkansas' 5th Congressional District.

As a result of Wells' investigation and testimony, a House committee recommended 3-2 that Alford be denied a seat in the House pending an investigation.

Alford, a staunch segregationist, conducted a last-minute, whirlwind campaign as a write-in candidate to unseat veteran Rep. Brooks Hays (D-Ark), a moderate on the racial issue. On the basis of original returns, Alford won by about 1,200 votes.

Wells charged that the Alford campaign and election was fraught with irregularities, fraud and conspiracy. He singled out Arkansas Gov. Orval E. Faubus as an alleged conspirator to turn out Hays, the Democratic nominee. Faubus has denied the accusation.

Informing the public has been Wells' goal most of his 56 years.

He began his career as 7.50-a-week newspaper reporter in Little Rock, his home town. He won honorable mention on the Pulitzer Prize list in 1932 for a series of articles exposing graft in public office.

When he quit the daily field in 1935, the staff of Little Rock's Arkansas Gazette wrote of their departing city editor: He was bitten by a small but vicious insect known as the Bogus Politicus.

Wells served in the administration of the late Carl E. Bailey, who was Arkansas' governor from 1937 to 1941.

He was left to his own devices after Bailey was defeated in a third term bid.

Still a newspaperman at heart, he scraped together enough money to buy a used newspaper press and went into the printing business.

He launched his weekly Arkansas Recorder a few years later. Some called the Recorder a political newspaper. Wells said it was a "government news digest."

"A lot of people think I like politics," he said. "I abhor politics. I definitely believe that government is the big challenge.

"I think politics is a necessary evil."

The Recorder's purpose, he continued, was to report state government news in depth — something he felt the dailies failed to do. By policy the Recorder avoids interviews with political officeholders — its stories, instead, rely on public records.

The paper—with a paid circulation of approximately 4,000—also is a sounding board for Wells.

His pointed editorials have lashed friend and foe alike and generally take the stand of the Southern conservative.

In recent years his main target for criticism has been Gov. Faubus.

Wells has denounced the U. S. Supreme Court's desegregation decision, while decrying Faubus' handling of the Little Rock school integration.

A friend who felt the sting of Wells' editorial bite was Hays himself.

Despite their close relationship, Wells' recorder pointed an accusing finger at the congressman for his racial moderation.

But Wells doesn't feel he is fighting Hays' battle, or against Alford.

"It should be Wells vs. Faubus," he said.

West Europe Said Jubilant

LONDON (AP)—Jubilant was expressed in Western Europe today over the launching of the four-ton American earth satellite.

"Good," said the man on the Moscow street. "It gives us competition."

Late editions of Britain's biggest newspapers revamped their front pages to carry the news.

"Amazing U.S. space triumph," trumpeted the tabloid Daily Mirror. It said: "The American stride forward into space proves the Americans now have a super-rocket that can serve a dual role — blasting Russia's secret war centers or enabling the United States to put big research laboratories crammed with instruments of many kinds into space."

"It also brings very much nearer the day when man makes the first trip into space."

At Jodrell Bank, England, the operators of the world's largest radio telescope, which has tracked other American satellites and the Pioneer moon shots, apparently were as much surprised as the rest of the world.

At the time of the launching, the telescope was engaged in routine astronomical observation, and four Americans who have helped in previous trackings of U.S. space were off duty.

The Soviet regime first told its people about the orbiting Atlas some eight hours after the first announcement in Washington. Moscow radio broadcasts in both Russian and English told of the missile advance without any comment.

Treacherous 650-Foot Cliff May Hold Key To Mystery

PORTLAND (AP)—The key to the mystery of a missing Portland family may lie at the bottom of a treacherous 650-foot cliff. A search party goes down today to find out.

The hunt for Mr. and Mrs. Ken Martin and their three young daughters shifted late Thursday to Crown Point, a scenic viewpoint overlooking the Columbia River 15 miles west of here.

Sheriff's deputies said a hat and scarf found on the cliff, plus freshly broken trees, hinted that the car carrying the family may have shot into the canyon.

"It's a possibility it may be them," said deputy Bill Whiting. "But again, it may not be. We'll just have to check and find out."

The cliff falls off sharply for about 350 feet, levels out for a short distance and then turns into a sloping wall of shale that ends in a waterless basin.

It was on part of the lower wall that deputy Jack Elliott found the hat and scarf. Later, deputies found a freshly-snapped tree, and said it appeared a heavy object had cut a path through dense brush.

Late Thursday, three Gresham firemen swung about 250 feet on ropes down the face of the cliff.

They found no car, and were forced back by darkness.

At the top of the cliff is a high-top. There is no guard rail along part of it.

Deputy Elliott found the hat and scarf after Janice Moore, the operator of a cafe at Crown Point, said she heard a car horn the afternoon of Dec. 7.

She heard it clearly for several minutes; but saw no car along the highway. Later, she said, she heard it again.

It was on Dec. 7 that the Martin family vanished after setting out from Portland to find a Christmas tree.

The search has covered most wooded areas and streams in the vicinity of Portland, in addition to Larch Mountain and Mount Hood.

Martin, 54, was an employe of an electric company here. His wife is 48. Their daughters are Barbara, 14; Virginia, 12; and Sue, 10.
