WALL STREET

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market closed at another record high today in active trading. Late prices were below their best of the session.

In late afternoon key issues were up fractions to around two points a share.

Some favorites fared considerably better. U.S. Steel paced a higher steel group with a gain of more than five.

U.S. Steel is among a number of issues mentioned as potential split candidates since the split of American Telephone & Telegraph was proposed.

Utilities, metals, chemicals, rubbers, and electronics issues also were strong. Motors and rails generally edged up fractions. Oils were mixed. Airlines and aircraft were a shade lower.

Turnover was at a rate of 3,900,000 shares for the day compared with last Wednesday's 3,050,000.

The advance was regarded by many in Wall Street as a traditional yearend rally.

pital bill. Papa will take care of it all.

So there you are.

SECURITY.

Security from the cradle to the grave. Nothing to worry about. Papa will take care of it all. You must, of course, do exactly as Papa says. But, if you do exactly as Papa says, you will be housed and fed and clothed. No worries. No decisions to make. No RESPONSIBILITIES.

Well—

If that is what the red Chinese want, I suppose it is what the red Chinese will get. If it is what the Russians want, I suppose it is what the Russians will get.

But I hope this thinking doesn't spread. If it spreads far enough, there will sooner or later BE NO AMERICA—for what we call the American way of life involves TAKING CHANCES.

Without an America, this would be a grim and unpromising world.

Board Okays Resolution

YREKA—A resolution was adopted by the Siskiyou County Board of Supervisors, during a recent session placing their stamp of approval on Siskiyou County joining with Tehama, Shasta and Butte counties in the construction of a boys camp on Mt. Shasta for delinquent youths between the ages of 15 and 17, who are not in enough serious trouble to warrant them being placed with the California Youth Authority.

Superior Judge James M. Allen and county Probation Officer Jess Brewer requested the resolution be adopted by the supervisors, stating that the camp would be an ideal place for the boys, and closer than any other site required.

It was necessary that the resolution be made to assure a contribution of $36,000 toward the camp by the state. Siskiyou County has already budgeted $11,500 for the camp, and anticipates an annual expenditure of $2,700.

Work will be provided for the youths at the camp by the U.S. Forest Service.

Few Of France's People Had Heard Of De Gaulle Before World War II

PARIS. (UPI) — Last May 29 the highest personage of the French republic, President Rene Coty, stood before a palpitating chamber-full of deputies and invoked the name of Gen. Charles de Gaulle. There was a historic inevitability about it.

The mobs were loose in the streets of Algiers, restive in the streets of Paris. Police leaves had been cancelled; the Champs-Elysees was an armed-camp. Rumors of paratroopers dropping from the skies flew thickly.

For the National Assembly and for France the choice was between, on the one hand, revolution, anarchy or dictatorship—possibly all three — or the one man whose integrity nobody questioned, however much they might question his politics: De Gaulle.

The assembly gratefully chose De Gaulle and the nation ratified this choice months later, in De Gaulle's constitutional referendum of Sept. 28, 1957, by an 80 per cent vote for him.

Yet 18 years earlier when De Gaulle broadcast his appeal to a prostrate France on June 18, 1940, few Frenchmen had ever heard of him.

"This war is not over with the battle of France," De Gaulle said then. "This war is a world war." (An anonymous but wideawake publicist later changed this to "France has lost a battle; she has not lost the war.")

De Gaulle went on, "every Frenchman who still bears arms has the absolute duty of continuing resistance. Soldiers of France, wherever you are, arise!"

Frenchmen did arise, first by the dozens, later by the hundreds of thousands. It was slow going at first. De Gaulle not only had no official blessing from Paris; within the month the Petain government had stripped him of his French citizenship and condemned him in absentia to death.

But the same month British Prime Minister Winston Churchill recognized De Gaulle's free France.

De Gaulle had his troubles. Having tried and failed to win other French administrators and military commanders around the French empire to his cause, he insisted on forming a full-fledged free French government.

He won through, with his single-mindedness, his obstinacy, and the fact that he was the only French leader of stature who at that moment wanted to fight on.

Inevitably there were clashes with Churchill, who later made his famous remark: "Of all the crosses I had to bear, the heaviest was the Cross of Lorraine."

De Gaulle returned to liberated French soil a week after D-day, 1944. On August, 25, he marched down the Champs-Elysees to delirious cheers and attended a Thanksgiving Mass in Notre Dame Cathedral. German snipers were still about; shots crashed within the cathedral. Others ducked but De Gaulle stood erect.

He was at the head of the provisional government.

On Nov. 30, 1945, the constituent assembly confirmed De Gaulle as premier by a unanimous 555-0 vote. But the honeymoon was nearly over.

The following month the Communists were condemning De Gaulle for his refusal to entrust them with the decisive cabinet posts: Foreign Affairs, defense, interior.

The Socialists opposed him over the size of the defense budget. Other parties were chafing at De Gaulle's impatience with parliamentary procedure.

De Gaulle was more than impatient. He admitted later that he had considered — and rejected— a coup d'etat. In December he told the shocked deputies, "This will undoubtedly be the last time I will speak in this chamber. Therefore I want to tell you now: If you do not respect the necessary conditions for responsible and dignified government you are heading for a time when you will bitterly regret the path you have chosen."

France was close to starvation. Her industry was wrecked. France was free, yes, but her troubles were just beginning. Within two years Communist strikes and riots led France to the edge of civil insurrection. Indochina was in rebellion, the currency had embarked on the nonstop spiral of inflation that within a decade reduced the franc to one quarter of its immediate postwar value.

But Frenchmen did not forget De Gaulle. And with the degeneration of democracy into a political game, they remembered his warning to the deputies: "You are heading for a time when you will bitterly regret the path you have chosen."

On April 7, 1947, he created his "rally of the French people."

The party had a great initial success. But it was not enough to bring De Gaulle back to power. The party began to splinter. In May, 1953, after heavy losses in the municipal elections, De Gaulle set his party at liberty and retired from politics, but not from other activity.

His return to power was characteristically dramatic.

The morning after May 13, 1958, Frenchmen awoke to find that settlers and soldiers in Algiers had carried out a bloodless mutiny to demonstrate their fears of a French giveaway of Algeria. They were defying the authority of Paris and demanding the return of De Gaulle.

The mutiny jumped to Corsica and threatened to spread to France itself.

On May 19 De Gaulle came to Paris and at a press conference surrounded by the greatest security precautions that security-conscious Paris had ever seen, announced, "if the people want it, as in the preceding national crisis, I am ready to take the leadership. . ."

On June 1, 1958, De Gaulle returned to the chamber he had so abruptly walked out of 12 years before.

KF MAN CITED

Donald W. Backus, 27, 2444 Pershing Way, was cited by state police for following too closely after a Saturday evening accident in which the car he was driving collided with one driven by Carroll F. Jackson, 29, Chiloquin. The accident occurred one mile south of the Johns-Manville plant on Highway 97, when Jackson was attempting to make a left turn. The Backus vehicle struck the other car in the right rear. There were no injuries, only the Backus car was severely damaged, police report.

Ocean Floor Termed Rocky

WASHINGTON (AP)—The floor of the Arctic Ocean may be as rugged as the Rocky Mountains, a scientist reported today.

The report was one more close-up of Mother Earth provided by U.S. scientists during the International Geophysical Year, which ends Wednesday.

It was made by geophysicist Kenneth Hunkins of Columbia University's Lamont Geological Laboratory at a meeting of the American Assn. for the Advancement of Science.

Hunkins reported on what the underwater world looked like—a world through which the nuclear submarines Nautilus and Skate worked their way carefully a few months ago.

Above the path taken by the submarines, U.S. scientists floated on a wandering table of ice.

Using echoes from explosions, they charted the Arctic Ocean bottom.

They found a huge underwater plateau stretching from Ellesmere Island, the northernmost point of Canadian territory, to eastern Siberia.

In the center, parts of this plateau come within 4,500 feet of the surface. On the sides, it drops to depths of 10,000 to 15,000 feet.

U.S. Air Force and IGY scientists made the first photographs of the Arctic Ocean floor from their floating laboratory, Drifting Station A.

There are remarkable numbers of rocks strewn over the ocean bottom, as seen in the underwater pictures.

One Case Of Vandalism Solved By Local Police

A quick solution to one vandalism case was made possible during the early hours of Sunday by alert neighbors of the Ponderosa School. City police were notified at 12:24 a.m. that two medium sized windows at the school had just been broken, and were furnished with summary descriptions of the two cars allegedly involved.

Police report that a short time later they found one of the cars, parked near a Main Street restaurant, and hearing physical evidence of having been at the schoolgrounds. Upon their return to the car, the six occupants were escorted to police headquarters.

After considerable questioning, the boys reportedly admitted having been at the school. Police say that 17-year-old Keith M. Larson, 2533 Applegate Avenue, one of the group, was implicated in the breaking of one window. This was done with a snowball mixed with gravel.

Police report the boys also implicated Donald R. Collins, 18, U.S. Army, now on leave at his home, Route 1, Box 936. Collins, who is recovering from a broken leg, allegedly broke one window with his crutch. He was no longer with the group when the six boys were picked up, but was summoned to police headquarters. Charged with disorderly conduct, he forfeited $25 bond Monday morning in municipal court.

Larson was released to juvenile authorities. The other five boys were released after the questioning.

Police said Monday that there was no evidence at that time to link the two boys with any other instance of vandalism.

Among the other instances of vandalism reported over the weekend were these:

Sunday afternoon Max L. Ruge, 933 Grant Street, reported that the antenna of his car had been broken off. At about the same time, V. J. Englund, 1820 Eldorado Boulevard, reported that the antennas of several cars parked near St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Eighth and Jefferson streets, had been bent or broken off.

During the night of Saturday to Sunday, vandals broke a large hole in a window, six and a half feet square, on the Spring Street side of the Coca Cola bottling plant. The breakage was done with a bone hurled through the window.

Huge Throng Sees Program

FORT ROCK—A record audience turned out here for the annual yuletide program presented by pupils of the Fort Rock Elementary School. In addition to parents and local friends many Silver Lake folk attended.

Their kitchen band, composed of Suzanne Gillette, Judy Irwin, Shelia Means, Linda Kittredge, Kenneth and Bobbie Lee Morehouse, Randy and Roger Bothern, Bob Heller and Walter McGee, won special applause.

Bobbie Lee Morehouse and Roger Bothern announced for the primary room.

The upper grade program, directed by Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Wagers, featured a play with a school room setting. Rehearsal for their Christmas program was in progress. Bill Parks portrayed the school teacher and Howard (Buck) McGee was Puddinhead Jones.

Donna Hergert presented accordion numbers. Donna, Bob Bothern, Tom Morehouse, Judy Heller, Michael Mattis, Douglas Hergert and Wanda Zvir gave readings. Others were included in a short play and flute numbers.

Santa, played by Richard Brown, distributed gifts brought for exchange and the treats provided by the Fort Rock Community Sunday School and Fort Rock Grange. Mrs. Robert Morehouse, assisted by Mrs. Richard Morehouse and Mrs. Richard Brown, trimmed the tall tree and prepared the treats. Mrs. Black decorated the hall.

School Holds Yule Program

YREKA—A Christmas musicale, "Noel," was presented by the seventh and eighth grade classes of the Yreka Elementary School at the December meeting of the Yreka Parent Teachers Association in the multipurpose room of the Jackson Street School.

Under the direction of Mrs. J. K. Phelps, the meeting was opened with the presentation of the flag by Girl Scout Troop 234, with Beth Phelps, Robin Day and Marilyn Purington as flag bearers.

It was announced by Robert Reynolds, elementary school superintendent, that the bond election for the senior elementary school will be held February 17, and he spoke briefly on the need for more school rooms.

Under the direction of Howard Buckner, the seventh and eighth grade pupils included in their presentation "Noel," "Hark the Herald Angels Sing," "Oh Little Town of Bethlehem," "White Christmas," "Silent Night," "Jingle Bells," "Come All Ye Faithful" and "Away in the Manger."

The program also included a narration read by several of the pupils on the origin of the many Christmas carols.
