SPRING HAT STYLES

Previews of trends in millinery scene. Silhouettes with open crowns, allowing the hair to show, seem an avant garde trend to watch. Fabrics are put to good use from airy, light organzies and delicate hairbraids to texture checks, straw cloth and novelty braids. Both textured and smooth straws are evident in the collection, with the latter predominating - balubunal, bako-soies, toyes, panamalacs and the like. Bloused berets and softly draped toques are important as travel hats, as well as for the street scene. Clear colors this spring give hat silhouettes extra sparkle. The blue spectrum from the palest to royal enhances the color scene. Hues of sun yellow, peridot (a green-yellow), cherry fizz (a vibrant pink), brighten the color horizon. A "near-white" is the new neutral for spring, along with beige to mocha tones and white and black completing the plan. Many hats sit just back of the hairline, some with a decided profile tilt, and almost without exception the hair shows.

LILLY DACHE presents the elegant wide-brimmed cloche of tan pebble weave linen straw at left. It is accented with a giant tan faille band. The high-styled crown, unusually tall, perfectly exemplifies the upward look for spring. The silhouette has a smart profile tilt. At right, Miss Mary fashions an oriental with geranium maple leaf coil. It fits gently on the back of the head, the geranium leaves just touching the coiffure. Photos are courtesy of the Millinery Institute of America.

YOUNG VIEWPOINT, New York, gathers comas to make a fashion point and adds a new look to Spring's favorite dot. The silk linen blouson comes in black, navy, French blue or Ming green - all with a frosting of white pique. It is style 196.
