Local Students On Honor Roll

Three students from Klamath Falls were among the 255 undergraduates listed on the fall term honor roll at the University of Oregon.

The local students were William S. Bechen, senior in pre-medical curriculum, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Bechen, 415 Washington Street; Wendell T. Beyer, freshman in chemistry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Beyer, Route 1 Box 924; and Fairy J. Gardner, junior in pre-law, daughter of Mrs. Fay Pappin, 1020 Jefferson Street.

Students must make grade point averages of 3.50 or higher, based on programs of not less than 12 term hours, in order to be included on the honor roll.

North European

enough that changes in school systems occur about as rapidly as they do between your states.

"All I meant to say is that there appear to be some areas in your country which cannot offer nearly as extensive educational opportunities, for one reason or another, as others, and that this will probably change as time goes on. I'd like to come back in five years and see what changes have taken place."

The party has been making its way for the past three weeks across the northern part of the United States, having completed a three-month course on American civilization at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, New Jersey, on December 19. The teachers are visiting educators back and forth across the country. Because of the Christmas vacation, Klamath Falls was the first point on their trip where they could visit schools in session.

"Before attending Rutgers we had already spent three weeks in Washington, D.C.," Louise A. B. Meincke, who teaches English and French at the Aurehj Statsgymnasium, Copenhagen, said, "and in New Brunswick we lived with private families, which gave us a good view of American life."

The teachers also got to visit New York City frequently during their stay in Jew Jersey, thus seeing yet another important side of the United States and getting a taste of such special activities as the opera and the theater.

Their stay in this country is sponsored by the U.S. Office of Education, under the international teacher education program authorized by various acts of Congress. Money for this visit was provided by the Ford Foundation, and a total of 16 teachers from nine countries are taking part in it. Completing the six-member party visiting Klamath Falls were Sven K. H. Nyberg, teacher of English at the Pargas, Finland, svenska samskola, and principal of a workers' institute there, and Ilma S. Hakulinen, teacher of English at the Oulu, Finland, Lyseo.

This particular program, designed for English teachers, is intended to provide them with greater knowledge of life in America. One of many programs operating both ways across the Atlantic, it provides opportunities for extensive fact-gathering, but very little spare time for reflection. Undoubtedly, the teachers will think about these facts at leisure, after returning home. In the meantime of course, they are noting points of difference between Europe and America.

As educators, they observed that in the United States almost everyone goes to high school, attending schools similar to those everyone else is attending. In Northern Europe, a process of selection takes effect at the ninth grade level. European students are either directed to one of five alternate basic high school courses, or away from high school altogether, to a vocational school. There one does not find driver training courses, an extensive shop program and highly developed music courses existing alongside the traditional academic subjects.

A detail, but one that results in a rather quieter atmosphere in Europe from that in America, is that it is the teachers, not the students, who move from room to room there.

The teachers' swing across the top of the United States had brought them into contact with many former countrymen and their descendants, but it had been enjoyable for another reason as well.

"When we were at Rutgers," Havnevik said, "many fellow students warned us about the bad weather we could expect to the north. But while we were headed across the Dakotas and Montana we had good weather. It was Kansas that was hit by blizzards and even Florida had frost."

They left here on the Daylight Wednesday on the first leg of their trip back across the country, via San Francisco, Los Angeles and New Orleans. Their trip will end at the close of February.

"Please tell all your readers how appreciative we are of the hospitality we've experienced," Havnevik said. "It's been quite amazing."

A-Test Ban Chances Hit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two U. S. atomic explosions which unexpectedly mimicked earthquakes may have torpedoed chances of an international nuclear test ban.

They also have raised the possibility that the Russians, while engaged in test ban talks at Geneva, could be conducting secret underground atomic experiments unsuspected by the West.

In any event, they have triggered new demands in this country for resumption of U.S. tests aimed at perfecting small nuclear weapons for missile defense and limited warfare.

The fraudulent behavior of the two atomic explosions was disclosed by official sources as a result of this week's statement by the White House that scientific detection of underground nuclear tests appears to be more difficult than once supposed.

One upshot of the White House statement was the scheduling of closed hearings next Monday and Tuesday at which the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee will quiz a host of administration officials on U. S. test policy and will thoroughly re-examine the question of whether it is practically possible to police an international ban agreement.

Miller Firm Found Guilty By Examiner

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A National Labor Relations Board trial examiner found Thursday that the Miller Mercantile Co. Inc., had been guilty of unfair labor practices at its Wenatchee and Yakima, Wash., stores.

The examiner, David F. Doyle, recommended that the Portland, Ore., firm be required to bargain with the Retail Clerks Union as the representative of all Miller employes in Wenatchee and Yakima, except for office help and watchmen.

He also recommended that the company be required to furnish the union with all data it needs on wages, hours and working conditions in the two stores.

Doyle said Miller had committed unfair labor practices in refusing to bargain with the union, changing working conditions arbitrarily at the Wenatchee store and refusing to provide the union with data it had requested.

The examiner said he would not direct that the five-day week instituted unilaterally at Wenatchee be rescinded "because it appears to be of benefit to the employes and in accordance with their desires." He said, however, the five-day week issue should be a subject at the bargaining sessions when the company and union get together.

Doyle held a hearing in Wenatchee last September 30 on unfair labor practice charges brought against Miller by the union. His recommendations go to the NLRB in Washington for action.

In an earlier proceeding which involved only the Yakima store, the NLRB found Miller guilty of unfair labor practices and directed it on July 26, 1957 to bargain exclusively with the Retail Clerks Union as representative of its employes there.

CAP MEETS MONDAY

The Klamath Falls Civil Air Patrol Squadron will meet Monday, January 12, at 7 p.m. in the publications building across from the headquarters building at Kingsley Field. Anyone interested is invited to attend.

THE FIRST BIG SNOW STORM of the season hit Dunsmuir and Southern Siskiyou County as far south as Redding County on Monday causing schools to be closed and traffic in general to slow down. This picture taken Monday afternoon in downtown Dunsmuir by Peggy Walsh, Herald and News correspondent, shows some of the drifts that piled up along one of the main streets. It was taken when the snow was still falling. Fourteen inches were reported in the city Monday morning.

Heavy Snows Maroon Trio

DUNSMUIR—Three people have been marooned at the Mt. Shasta Ski Bowl since the heavy snow storm on Monday. Mr. and Mrs. Bill diChristina and E. A. Christensen are weathering the storms at the winter resort, but are in no danger.

The power has not been shut off and provisions had been made for such an emergency. There is plenty of food and an apartment available for the snowbound trio. Christensen is chef at the lodge restaurant and diChristina is manager of the Mt. Shasta Ski Bowl Corporation.

The latest report was 75 inches of snow pack.

The road crew from Mount Shasta started plowing the road on Monday and got through eight miles on Tuesday. On Wednesday, they went an additional three miles, leaving about four miles yet to go.

Frank Asbell of the U.S. Weather Bureau at Mount Shasta forecasts heavy precipitation for today and tomorrow. The snow level is between 4,000 and 4,500 feet.

It is raining heavily on the lower levels with Mount Shasta reporting 2.65 inches of rain in the last 24 hours and Dunsmuir, 2.42 inches. The rivers have risen about one and one half feet but are within normal limits. Vollmers, about half way between Dunsmuir and Redding, reported 5.36 inches within the last 24 hours.

had happened, he said, when we got outside on top.

We scrambled up a narrow ladder.

At the top, immediately at the foot of the tower, I could see the trouble as close as my hand.

An angle brace was anchored through the roof to the "I" beams, and the foot of the tower had been bolted to it. But the bolts had been sheared completely away. Where once there had been parallel plates of steel bolted as one, there now were two plates moving away from each other.

The distance between them varied, with gusts of wind, from two inches to four.

But no beams were cracked, or threatened.

"That thing's moved about an inch since I was up here," Larson said. I'd swear the plates had moved half an inch in the 10 minutes I was on top, but certainly they didn't.

The metal leg opposite the one that had broken away remained fastened to the brace, but the brace had slipped from the steel beam and was digging into the wooden surface of the roof. With each gust of wind one end of the tower rose and the other end dug in.

Miller and two men returned soon and fastened three high-test steel chains to the loose leg. That would hold for a while, he said, and it held through the night.

More permanent repairs would depend on the wind's behavior. The wind continued through the night, but did not reach gusts greater than the 46 m.p.h. sweeps that shook the tower loose.

Vern Schortgen, city building inspector, watched the action from below. It was he, he said, who erected the tower in 1940 when he was working for a private firm. He estimated the angle of tilt at 5 to 8 degrees, but thought the tower would stay put.

Gellatly said the tower "never has been bothered by wind before. It must have been hit just right." He said neon men, painters and roofers had been up to the tower many times and never noticed anything wrong.

Activities Set By Moose Lodge

Several activities are planned by the Loyal Order of Moose in the immediate future, starting with the lodge's annual crab feed Saturday night, January 10. There will be a cocktail hour from 6 to 7 p.m. with serving to start at 7. Dancing will follow to music by the Quixotes. Members and guests are invited.

Orval K. Musgrove heads the crab - cracking committee. Mel Robinson is in charge of serving.

Sunday, January 11, the local lodge will be host to the White Pelican Legion for a noon dinner and monthly business meeting. The Legion is the second degree in Moose lodges. Attendance will be from Bend, Medford, Merrill and Klamath Falls.

The January birthday meeting scheduled for the 31st will be for the benefit of the March of Dimes with all proceeds from the dance to be given to the fund campaign.

RODEO TO BE HELD

The Merrill Roping Club will sponsor a jack pot rodeo at the Klamath County Fairgrounds Saturday and Sunday, January 10-11. Starting time Saturday will be 7 p.m., on Sunday at 12:30 p.m. The meet to be held indoors in the heated livestock sales arena will feature cutting horse contests; six-steer average team roping and four-calf average calf roping. Refreshments will be available. Everyone is welcome.

Defendant Takes Stand

Eddie Lee Dailey took a circuit court witness stand shortly before noon Wednesday to testify in his own defense against charges of buying and receiving stolen property.

Dailey is accused of buying a 35 h.p. outboard motor stolen from a Broad Street warehouse in October.

Another man, Roosevelt Carter, previously pleaded guilty to stealing the motor and was placed on two year's probation.

But Dailey, said Defense Attorney Richard C. Beesley, did not know the motor was stolen when he bought it from Carter for $50.

Beesley, addressing the jury prior to Dailey's testimony, said his witness' testimony "was expected to show that at the time the motor was purchased he had no knowledge it had been stolen."

"He asked," Beesley said, "and was affirmatively told that it had not been stolen. He had no knowledge of the theft whatsoever."

The trial opened Wednesday with a defense motion, equivalent to asking for a directed verdict, still under consideration by Judge David R. Vandenberg.

Prosecution witnesses, produced by District Attorney Arthur A. Beddoe, included Carter, who had admitted the theft; George Linder, who said he owned the motor; City Detective Dennis Lilly, who arrested Dailey and said he found the motor covered by clothing in a closet in Dailey's home; and Police Officer James O'Neill, who assisted Lilly in the arrest.

Wild Driver, Police Meet In Accident

An 18-year-old boy who led police on a 50 mile-an-hour chase down dignified Eldorado Boulevard and into a minor accident was arrested on reckless driving charges last night.

Police said a patrol car spotted a car driven by Roy Wendell Billings, 18, 2144 Greensprings Drive, tearing down Eldorado. An officer took chase, followed Billings around the corner of Fremont Street, and ran into the youth's car when it stopped suddenly, blocking Fremont at Pacific Terrace.

Both cars were damaged slightly, the patrol car more than the youth's car.

Officers said Billings admitted he was endangering his life and the lives of his three juvenile passengers, and said the youth gave no reason for his wild ride.

He was fined $25 or 12½ days on the charge in municipal court Wednesday.

Two more wheels and tires have been stolen. Ralph Fuller, 4831 Summers Lane, said a wheel and tire were stolen from his pickup parked beside the house, and Robert Secrest, 112 South 11th Street, said a wheel and tire were stolen from his car sometime in the last week.

That theft was the first in a series that was made from a car. The other wheel-and-tire victims have been pickup truck owners.

Police also said Ann's Cafe, 125 South Seventh Street, was entered last night, but apparently nothing was taken.

Position Given To Ex-President

Charley Bane, immediate past president of the chamber of commerce, is the first person named to head a working committee for the chamber's "Keep Pace With Tomorrow" program.

Bane was named chairman of a citizens' advisory committee charged with making a thorough examination of the Klamath Basin's future business, industrial and civic needs.

He already has mailed letters to 42 civic and industrial leaders, recent past chamber presidents, service and women's club leaders, religious leaders and others who have been asked to join his committee.

The committee, which meets for the first time next Wednesday noon at the Winema, also will be asked to comment upon the broad development program and its progress.

FIRE CALLS

Local fire departments had three relatively minor calls Wednesday morning. The city fire department was summoned to the Donna Henris residence, 238 Martin Street, where a flue fire was put out before any damage resulted, and then to Eleventh Street and Walnut Avenue, to wipe up gas which had leaked onto the street from a truck. Meanwhile, the Suburban Fire Department put out a grass fire in a field at 3049 South Sixth Street. Cause of the fire was unknown, and no damage resulted.
