ON LITTLE LEAGUE CARD — Oregon State AAU Novice champion, Ken O'Leary, 135 pounder from Lakeview, pictured, is matched with Klamath Union's Jake Gregg in one of the feature bouts of the coming Little League Ballpark Benefit Amateur fight program scheduled here January 22. Fourteen bouts are slated for the card, which is a community project to help toward the eventual construction of a local Little League ballpark.

KU Scrapper Set For Go On LL Card

Jake Gregg, 135 pound scrapper from Klamath Union High, has been matched with Lakeview's Ken O'Leary, in another of the feature bouts on the coming Little League Baseball Park benefit program slated for Klamath Auditorium, Thursday, January 22, it was reported today by co-matchmakers Buck Davidson and Jerry Jennings.

Gregg, a very able puncher, has been training under Jennings in the past and from now until fight-time will work under Billy Sunday who has appeared on many local cards in the past few years. Gregg is training in the YMCA.

His opponent, O'Leary, is a member of the Lakeview PAL club, and wears an Oregon State AAU Novice championship belt in the 135 pound division. O'Leary is entered in the Portland Golden Gloves. He lost a one-point split decision to Everett Capps, Burns, the Northwest AAU title-holder who was a finalist in the National competition in Boston.

The Gregg-O'Leary pairing is the second match to be arranged so far, Davidson reports. Frankie Lightle, of New Pine Creek, and Dalton Steel of Lakeview, both 147, were paired last week. The remainder of the 14 bout card will be set this week.

McCloud Loggers Drop Fall River

FALL RIVER — The McCloud Loggers staged a come from behind rally to drop the Fall River cagers 33-27 here Saturday night.

Although the Loggers got off to a 10-8 lead in the first period of play they hit the doldrums in the second frame and scored only three points while the Fall River five kept plugging away. The count at halftime was 17-13 for Fall River.

In the second half of the test the Loggers began to take hold and grabbed the lead for keeps midway in the third stanza. From here on they were never seriously challenged.

Al Fabbrini and Louie Tallerico, both of McCloud, shared scoring honors; each had eight points.

A tough defensive contest, the game was noticeably clean. McCloud got only eight free throw chances and hit five of those. Fall River collected 7-13. The Loggers scored a neat .450 from the field.

McCloud (33)		(27) Fall River
Bonneville (4)	F	(6) Zumwalt
Rossi (2)	F	(7) McClung
Tallerico (8)	C	(6) Timone
Fabrini (8)	G	(7) Zoller
Scalise (2)	G	(1) Taylor

Subs for McCloud: Jordan 3, Long 6. Subs for Fall River, Knoch, Meeker.

POSTPONE BOUT

BOSTON (UPI)—Next Monday's scheduled 10 - round middleweight fight between Paul Pender of Brookline, Mass., and Rocky Tomasello of Mattawan, N.J., has been postponed. The bout was called off by promoter Johnny Buckley because Pender is ill with a virus infection.

'B' Cagers Set Battles For Tonight

A full slate of Klamath County B basketball activity tonight finds the league's top four teams scheduled for tough battles to maintain or better their spots on the ladder.

The feature game of the night finds the Malin Mustangs and the Chiloquin Panthers, who are tied for third, clashing on the Chiloquin court while the Bly Bobcats, who moved back into a tie for first place by defeating Merrill last Friday face a real challenge from the Sacred Heart Trojans on the academy floor.

The co-holder of the top rung, the Merrill Huskies, are rated the favorite over the Bonanza Antlers whom they will meet at Merrill. Bonanza has yet to break into the win column in league action. Merrill has a 4-2 mark.

Rounding out the evening are the Gilchrist Grizzlies who move south to try the Henley Hornets. Gilchrist, the bottom team on the pole, was handed a 60-25 clobbering by Malin their last time out. Henley, an A-2 school was edged 44-43 by Chiloquin. B school matches with Henley do not count in conference standings.

The Mustang - Panther clash shapes as the toughest setto of the four. Both squads have 3-2 records and each are vastly improved over their early season form.

The Bobcats kept the Huskies under their thumb in one of the hardest defensive battles of the campaign when they trimmed Merrill 35-28 at Bly to extend their homecourt jinx over the Huskies, last Friday. Bly has or its roster the league's top-scorer, Jerry Patzke, who had been pounding away at a 24.0 clip until the Merrill match when he was held to his lowest total to date, seven points.

The Bonanzans, who have yet to reach what is considered their true potential, will have their hands full with the Huskies who will do their best to wipe out the sting of the loss to Bly.

Celtic Coach Claims World's Greatest '5'

NEW YORK (NEA) — The Boston Celtics lost the National Basketball Association title to the St. Louis Hawks last year with Bill Russell, the big man, useless with a broken ankle.

It showed the Celtics could not get by with anything less than their Bob Cousy-Bill Sharman-Russell alignment, no matter how good the players are individually. And this season, with Cousy now 30 and hobbled by a bad ankle, the Celtics got off sluggishly.

It seemed in order, then, to give the Celtics — who until Russell's injury last year were considered the best basketball team ever to play — a close inspection this season for signs of deterioration.

'Go look," Red Auerbach snorted. He was standing in the tunnel leading to the Boston dressing room at Madison Square Garden before the club he coaches took the floor to play the New York Knickerbockers.

"I got the greatest team in the world," he snapped. "Cousy was slowed up by the ankle. We tried him on it and he didn't go, so we took him out of there until he was ready. Russell was sick for a while. Frank Ramsey had a bad back. But they're fine now. And you can see that in two minutes.

"Injuries, mainly early in the year, are bound to hit us. This is a running club. We run guys right out of the building. Anytime you play like that you have to come up with a bad ankle someplace."

On the court, Auerbach's thoughts were borne out. No matter how many times you see the Celtics play they still shock you with what they can do.

Cousy brings the ball down quickly, his face as impassive as a big businessman — which he is. For his size, 6-2, he has huge, long-fingered hands. Anybody who does things well with his hands, from a piano player to a card shark, has big hands. Cousy handles a ball as if he were dealing you blackjack in Las Vegas.

Russell, 6-9, stays underneath, in a half-stoop, ready to leap for a rebound.

Bill Sharman, his mouth set in what looks like a grin but actually is grim, teeth-together concentration, moves with Cousy in the back. Tom Heinsohn, the 6-7 crew cut kid who shoots from anywhere, at any time, likes to get into the right corner. Jim Loscutoff, the fifth man, is 6-5, and he shoots from the side and tries to stay under for rebounds as much as possible.

From this set-up, the Celtics shoot you dizzy. Sharman's one-hander is soft and the scorebooks show its accuracy. On a drive, Cousy is intolerable for defenders and he'll stop in the middle of one and drop in a one-hander.

They wrecked the New York team with this operation. On defense, Russell performs just as he did in college. He stays near the foul line, in what amounts to the only one man zone in history, and any time somebody drives for the basket, up goes Russell. He pogos off the floor, his hands high and fingers outstretched, and most of the time the man with the ball has to stop dead and pass it back to start another play all over.

"It's senseless to try to get by him," Fuzzy Levane of the Knickerbockers says. "He is too much. He has gotten to be a mental block for every player in the league."

In the middle of this, Cousy and Sharman are ball - hawking. Their hands flash for interceptions. Cousy takes liberties. He chases the ball. Russell can pick up his man, he knows that.

With this, a Cousy solo fast-break is commonplace.

Forget that they lost the title last year. One look at the Celtics in action tells you they are all they are supposed to be — the greatest team the game has ever known.

Portland Eyes Extended Meet

PORTLAND (AP) — The Portland Turf Assn. Monday asked the State Racing Commission to extend its meet to 50 days this year at the Portland Meadows track.

The association would begin its season May 1 and end July 25, allowing four more days of racing than last year.

Multnomah Kennel Club asked for a 50-day dog racing season at the club's track, June 26 through Sept. 2.

QUITS AUTO RACING

LONDON (UPI)—Tony Vandervell, British racing auto owner, said today he is quitting the sport on doctor's orders. "My doctor told me I must give up the strain of running a 50-man racing team," Vandervell said. Vandervell's six Vanwall racing cars have become famous at race tracks the world over during the past few years.

Seattle Cage Mentor Talented Sax Player

By JACK HEWINS

SEATTLE (AP) — If the axe ever falls on the coaching career Vince Cazzetta, the young head man of Seattle University basketball can snatch his saxophone out of storage and hardly miss a payday.

He has been a card carrying member of the American Federation of Musicians for 18 years.

Now 33, Vince confesses he hadn't touched lip to horn for 10 years when his secret talent was discovered at a recent ball. Someone who knew of it pushed Cazzetta to the band stand, handed him a sax and backed away. After a few preliminary toots the head basketball coach took Sweet Georgia Brown for a jazz ride and the orchestra leader tried to hire him.

For a moment, there, Buddy Mason was back in business. Before World War II Vince for a time had his own 15-piece band, "Buddy Mason and His Orchestra." He was Mason.

The band played in Connecticut, Massachusetts and New York and Vince occasionally was tenor sax with small night club combos. "I thought seriously of making a career of music," he recalls. "But I was thinking just as seriously about medicine and athletics."

Vince and several of his young friends had taken up music as a hobby. The arrival of the war cut short his musical adventures and when Cazzetta graduated from the Army's 95th Division in 1946 he made his choice among music, medicine and muscle.

"I don't regret it," says Vince. He coached prep schools in New Britain and Hartford, Conn., and at Wilbraham Academy. He came west in 1956 as assistant to John Castellani at Seattle and got the job when Castellani resigned last spring.

Cazzetta has not followed the program of another horn playing hoop coach who soothed his players with music in the dressing room. That was Bill Borcher, former Oregon mentor, trumpeter and now a Pacific Coast Conference basketball referee. (Another sports figure who doubles in music is Bill Muncey, sax playing driver of the unlimited speedboat, Miss Thriftway.)

The coach doesn't feel his players need musical stimulant. Seattle was runner-up to Kentucky last year in the National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (NCAA) tourney and had won 9 out of 12 games this season at last look.

The horn purchased for him by the late Frank Cazzetta when Vince was a small boy may not have been played for a decade but it still is at the Cazzetta home in New Britain. "I'll never sell it," he says. "My dad deprived himself of things he needed to buy it for me."

And he just might have to send for it. Lightly kidded by his players at a squad meeting, Cazzetta promised them:

"If you win all your games from now on I'll get right out in the middle of the court after the last one and play 'Sweet Charley Brown.'"

Charley Brown, named to the NCAA all-tourney team last year, is the playmaking star of the 1959 Seattle Chieftains.
