Crews Seeking Water Pockets

PORTLAND (AP)—Crews today begin drilling holes to find water pockets that are causing slides in Portland's new four million dollar hillside zoo.

Work on three zoo projects has been halted because of the fear of new slides on a 20-acre tract that already has shifted eight inches down the hill.

Earlier, an engineer told the City Council that water pockets are helping to keep the slide going.

It was started initially, said Roland Rose, by a cut made at the bottom of the slope for a new road.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen Seems To Land On Feet

United Press International

Sen. Everett McKinley Dirksen, who survived a "liberal" revolt to win the Senate Republican leadership post, has the knack of coming out on top, even when he loses.

In 1952, only two years after he became a senator, the Illinois Republican was a prominent figure in the bitter fight for the GOP presidential nomination.

In that battle, he backed the loser, the late Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio, against President Eisenhower. But Dirksen's star continued to rise.

Two years ago, he was named Senate GOP "whip," or assistant minority floor leader, while a number of the so-called "Eisenhower Republicans" languished in the background.

This year Dirksen's colleagues by 20 to 14 elected him as their titular leader, despite an organized drive by the liberal group to defeat him.

The vote was a tribute both to his parliamentary skill and his ability to stay abreast of the shifting tides of politics. He began moving closer to the middle ground area represented by Eisenhower during the President's first term.

Since becoming GOP whip, Dirksen has been one of the administration's most vocal spokesmen on the Senate floor.

The 63-year-old Midwesterner, a veteran of almost a quarter of a century in Congress, retains in full the forensic powers that gained him national attention during the 1952 convention.

The televised finger of scorn which he pointed at former Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, an Eisenhower leader, was one of the dramatic highlights of that tumultuous meeting.

But Dirksen now uses his expansive vocabulary and organ-tuned voice more effectively in backstage maneuvering. During the next two years, he will have an opportunity to employ this art to the fullest.
