Talent, Courage Win Over Polio

By WARD CANNEL

NEW YORK (NEA)—To judge from the crowds and subsequent sales, Lorraine Huber's one - man show of water colors and pen-and-ink drawings was a great success. But by any standard, the show was a mighty triumph.

Lorraine Huber has been almost completely paralyzed by polio for 27 of her 31 years.

"I can't work too long on my painting," she said. "A half hour at a time is about the best I've been able to manage. I get awfully tired."

It was easy to see what energy she had to use. Her father pushed her wheel chair to the table and with a fearful effort she raised her hand from her lap to the table top.

"It takes a great deal of time," she said, sketching a tree on the back of an envelope, "just to get a drawing made."

Her mother reached over and raised Lorraine's right arm, showing a thick callous below the young artist's elbow.

"She has to keep her arm on the table when she works," Mrs. Huber said. "She doesn't have the control necessary to work at an easel."

Even without the control or the stamina to work for extended time, Lorraine Huber's pen-and-ink drawings show a fine detail that most of us could never manage.

"I seldom have to discard a wash or a painting because of a false start or a mistake," Lorraine said. "Most of the work I throw away is unacceptable in the late stages. Not because of smears. Just because I don't like it."

Oils, however are almost impossible. They don't dry quickly and Lorraine's arm often and involuntarily smears the paint.

She has no set procedure of work. Sometimes she will make sketches of the scenes she wants to paint. Sometimes she will work from a color photograph that she projects onto a small screen. And sometimes she will paint directly at the scene.

"I designed a table top," her father said, "that clamps onto her wheel chair. She puts her palette and paper right there and goes to work."

Most of her work was inspired by buildings and landscapes in New England or the southern states, places she has seen on automobile trips with her parents.

"I don't work in New York City," she said. "You set up here and in no time you are surrounded by people who stand behind you and tell you they don't like it, or they would do it differently."

Lorraine has been sketching, drawing and painting as long as she can remember—which is as long as she has been paralyzed. Her formal art training begain in 1941 with home instruction from Mrs. Irving Mahl, an art teacher with the New York Board of Education who would make the trip to the Huber home in Forest Hills.

In 1945 she enrolled in the Art Career School in Manhattan. Her father, a New York City fireman, would drive her to school and then carry her up two flights to the studio.

"I'd model for the students," he said, "or take a few lessons myself. I've got a little talent; it runs in our family. Of course, I stayed there because of Lorraine. I was always afraid of fire breaking out and no way for her to get out. It's an occupational disease of mine."

In 1952 Lorraine finished a two-year commercial art course and has been painting on her own. While most of her work has been hung by her parents, relatives and friends, several of her spot drawings have been used by a children's book publisher.

Her first one-man show, held in the library of Bellevue Medical Center's Institute of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation — where Lorraine is an out-patient—was set up by the art committee chairman, Mrs. Robert Haas.

"I don't think Mrs. Hass or the institute were just being nice," Lorraine said. "And I don't think the people who bought paintings were just being nice either. I think by now I can tell who's being nice and who's being sincere in giving me encouragement with my art."

CHEMULT GARDEN CLUB

The Chemult Garden Club met in the home of Mrs. V. I. Brader the evening of January 21. Mrs. Grant Damon presided over the business meeting. Plans for the juniors to be sponsored in the state program for poster and essay contests were decided upon and cards sent to each eligible student in town. The club decided to sponsor both groups which would make each age group eligible for two prizes. State rules headed by Mrs. Adolph Still of Clackamas provide this year that each age group may participate in both the posters and essays giving each child ample opportunity to show his talents and interest. Chemult juniors always have a big part in the fall flower show and in club planning.

Mrs. William Taylor had the program on "Planters" and very ably and cleverly demonstrated how to plant a planter and actually did planting giving the plant away during the evening to lucky Mrs. William Mott for a special prize. Mrs. Taylor illustrated her lecture with clever cartoons about what happens to the plant when placed in a location too drafty or too hot, what happened when overwatered or over fertilized, or placed in too large a container. If it is true that one remembers 75 per cent of what one sees—this lesson on planters will long be remembered.

Year books were given out and members told that the books had been sent in for the annual contest conducted by the state. Names of slate of officers were also sent in to Mrs. Sam Burch of Albany for the nominating committee to consider.

Mrs. Jane Priest and Mrs. William Mott were hostesses for the evening.

TULELAKE GARDEN CLUB

Mrs. Scott McKendree, district director of garden clubs and Mrs. Hugh O'Connor, president of the Lost River Garden Club, were present for the January 20 meeting of the Tulelake Garden Club held at the home of Mrs. Silver McFall.

Officers elected for the coming year were Mrs. Harold Schweitzer, president; Mrs. Wavaerly Pierce, first vice president; Mrs. John Takacs, second vice president; Mrs. Chet Main, secretary; Mrs. George Frey, treasurer. The new group is to be installed on May 18.

Th club voted to host the Klamath District Garden Clubs at a date to be announced.

C. H. Bussman, Klamath Falls, spoke on fertilizers and sprays.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. McFall, Mrs. Eugene Smith and Mrs. Phillip Krizo.

EVERGREEN GARDEN CLUB

Warner Kimball presented bird slides of over 120 species of birds native to this area at the January 14 meeting of the Evergreen Garden Club at the home of Mrs. Otto Clawson, 2827 Summers Lane.

In his commentary he told of the patience it takes to photograph birds in their natural settings. Mrs. Merritt, a club member, reported on the increase of starlings in this area.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Robert Luscombe. Mrs. Scott McKendree and her mother. Mrs. Edith DeLap, were guests.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Clawson, assisted by Pansy Jackson.

JUNIPER GARDEN CLUB

The January meeting of the Juniper Garden Club was held at the home of Mrs. Harvey Woodard, 5340 Alva. There were 12 members and one visitor present.

The hostess, Mrs. Woodard, had arranged a very attractive coffee table in shades of yellow. To add to the feeling of spring, the members reported on roll call that there were aubrietia, violets, pansies were in bloom, and that the lilacs were actually leafing out.

The subject under discussion was "Landscaping." The members reviewed the first two chapters of "The Art of Landscaping" by Grants, and then discussed the problem of using the correct scale in garden design to achieve certain effects.

Because of a change in vacation plans by some of the members, there will be a change in the program for the coming month. It will be held at the home of Mrs. C. E. McClellan, 1290 Patterson. The subject for discussion will be the care of roses in the spring, under the leadership of Wilma Linville.

Wool Growers End Meeting

PORTLAND (AP) — The National Wool Growers Assn. closed its 94th annual convention here Thursday by adopting 60 resolutions and upsetting its site committee's recommendation that the next convention be held in Las Vegas, Nev.

No reason was given for disapproving Las Vegas — widely known for gambling—but women delegates had expressed opposition to the city as a convention site because of the teen-age girls who attend the convention as entrans in the Make It Yourself With Wool contest.

The 1960 site will be chosen later, and may be either Denver or San Antonio, Texas.

The association protested a report that the Secretary of the Treasury was planning to lift the special tariff on Uruguayan wool, and asked for a delay until the American wool industry has a chance to be heard.

The association asked Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson to discontinue federal grading immediately, because "the production of light lean lambs, favored by housewives, is hampered by federal grading regulations."

Harold Josendal, Casper, Wyo., moved up from one of the vice presidency to the presidency.

George Hislop, Yakima, Wash., was elected vice president in Josendal's place. The other vice presidents, all reelected, are Angus McIntosh, Las Animas, Colo.; Penrose B. Metcalfe, San Angelo, Texas; David Little, Emmett, Idaho; and W. Hugh Baber, Chico, Calif.

Edwin E. Marsh, Salt Lake City, was reelected secretary-treasurer.

PTA NEWS

HENLEY

Henley PTA met for the January session at 6:30 p.m. in the Henley High School cafeteria for a potluck supper followed by a short business meeting presided over by Mrs. James (Jim) Grimes.

The flag salute was led by Mrs. Dehlinger's fourth grade. Mrs. Mrs. Mitchell's second grade won the room count. Men teachers and dads played a basketball game. Jim Bocchi was referee.

Founders Day will be observed February 4 at 2:30 p.m. with Mrs. Paul Fairclo in charge.

Compromise Predicted

SALEM (AP) — The quarrel over whether the Oregon state police should be placed under civil service appeared headed for compromise today.

A subcommitte of the House State and Federal Affairs Committee won Gov. Mark Hatfield's endorsement of a proposal to change the composition of the state police appeal board. This board, to which dismissed or reprimanded officers can appeal, now consists of three officers appointed by state police Supt. H. G. Maison.

The new proposal would have the board consist of two officers plus an outsider. The outsider probably would be from the civil service commission.

Members of the committee, which held a hearing on the bill Wednesday, said they thought the new plan would be an acceptable compromise.

However, state Sen. Richard E. Groener (D-Milwaukie), long a severe critic of Maison, said he will not compromise, and that the bill would be passed by both houses as now written.

But Rep. William H. Holmstrom (D-Gearhart) doubted the Legislature would put the police under civil service.

Holmstrom is a member of the subcommittee which conferred with Hatfield and Mason Thursday.

GRANGE NEWS

MIDLAND

A large crowd was present for a potluck dinner held at the grange hall on January 21.

Birthday gifts went to Mrs. Carl Youngren and Mrs. Joe Phillips. Mr. and Mrs. Mickey Wampler of Upper Klamath Lake Grange, of which he is master, were honored guests, as were Mr. and Mrs. Youngren.

A busy meeting followed the dinner. There were three proposals for membership.

The literary program was full of fun. Mrs. Minnie Andrieu gave two readings. An audience action game was led by Mrs. Mayme Cammock. The big event of the program was a hula hoop spinning contest. This was enjoyed by 35 members, four guests and 20 children. Happy Birthday was sung to Mrs. Kathryn Smith.

The next meeting will be on February 4 at the Midland Grange Hall.
