Drain, Sump Completed

MONTAGUE — According to releases from the office of the Soil Conservation Service engineers, who have been assisting the Shasta Valley Soil Conservation District, Vic Stuart of Montague recently completed a combination drain and sump. The sump is 1,175 feet long, four to five feet in depth and resulted in moving 3,448 cubic yards of earth. The ditch will aid in draining 30 acres of land. The end of the ditch is equipped with a discharge valve so that water can be stored for irrigation. The sump will hold 1.3 acre feet of water. The ditch was designed by the SCS engineers.

Also, Dr. B. H. Hager of the Willow Creek Ranch, lying several miles north of Montague, has completed 2,200 feet of erosion control levees, which is 10 feet across the top and was installed to contain water in Willow Creek and to prevent erosion of agriculture land. This structure was also designed and laid out by the SCS engineers, assisting the Shasta Valley Soil Conservation District.

Loren Herman, SCS soil scientist assisting the Shasta Valley District, has just completed a soil survey of the Mendenhall Brothers Ranch at Guys Gulch. The soil was mapped to show its depth, texture, any material which restricts roots, the slope, erosion hazard, alkali and any wetness problems. The soils were then classified according to their capabilities. A conservation soils map enables farmers and ranchers to use their land according to its capabilities, and to treat it according to its needs.
