Home Extension

LANGELL VALLEY
LANGELL VALLEY — The Langel Valley Home Extension Unit was host to the Bonanza unit at a meeting on civil defense at the home of Mrs. Art Monroe on February 4. Leaders were Mrs. Claude Brown and Mrs. Enos Bland. Mrs. Luther Noble, chairman of the Langel Valley unit, opened the meeting. Twenty-five ladies were present.

The danger of fall-out was explained by the leaders, who also told what should be done if Klamath Falls were bombed. Everyone was urged to attend the Parents and Patrons meeting on February 23 when Joe Surles of Klamath Falls will speak on civil defense. Two films will be shown on the subject at this meeting.

Mrs. Buford Hargus of Klamath Falls was a guest of the unit meeting and she displayed a first aid kit that she had made. Members decided to see if they could get Beverly Lyons of Medford to demonstrate beef cookery at the open meeting in March. Advanced sewing started February 11 at the Langel Valley parish hall with Mrs. Jack Lynch and Mrs. Wayne Yancey as leaders. The April project will be salads, led by Mrs. Eldon Kent and Mrs. Maurice Spillane.

A paper sack lunch was served at noon. Following the afternoon meeting, Mrs. Bob Colwell, who is moving to Klamath Falls with her family, was given a handkerchief shower.

Loans May Be Unaffected

SALEM (AP) — The action of assessor, went to 100 per cent of Multnomah County Assessor Joe Hawkins in reducing his county's assessed property values to 45 per cent of true cash value might have no effect on state farm and home loans to veterans, H. C. Saalfeld, state director of veterans affairs, said Wednesday. Saalfeld explained that when Wiley Smith, former county assessor, went to 100 per cent of true cash value in Multnomah County last year, that gave the veterans department an extra 60 million dollars of bonding power. It raised the ceiling on veterans bonds to 155 millions. This cannot be changed, he said, until next Aug. 15, the date the Tax commission makes its state levy of taxes.

Dispute Statement Given By Local WTC Manager

J. B. Bishop, manager of the Klamath Falls branch of Weyerhaeuser Timber Company today issued the following statement about the strike which stopped operations for four days during the last two weeks:

"Up to now we have not made any statements concerning the dispute that exists between the Coos Bay Local of the IWA and the Weyerhaeuser Timber Company's Coos Bay branch. We haven't made statements because our management has felt that it was their first responsibility to end the strike as quickly as possible to avoid economic loss.

"It has been our experience in the past that public statements tend to 'heat up' the situation and make settlement increasingly difficult. Now that pickets have been removed, at least temporarily, it seems advisable to explain our past silence and pass along some of our feelings with respect to this unfortunate occurrence to those who may be interested.

"Stated simply, the strike started at Coos Bay on January 22, when the company refused to re-instate a truck driver who had been discharged on December 11, 1958, for unsafe driving practices. Between December 11 and January 22 the local management, as well as Tacoma office personnel made a number of careful and thorough investigations of the facts and charges, and their findings confirmed the action originally taken in making this decision.

"The company was simply carrying out its responsibility to determine whether the continued employment of an individual is in the best interest of the other employees. We recognize fully the right of the union to challenge such determination and it is this challenge that has brought about the strike at Coos Bay.

"We regret exceedingly the loss of work and hardship which has been brought to our employees and this community as a result of this purely local Coos Bay dispute. We wish to emphasize what we have said before, that there is absolutely no local issue involved or any controversy between this branch and its local union.

"As you have already learned from other sources, the company made an offer on Monday which Tuesday night was rejected by the Coos Bay local. Consequently, the strike continues at Coos Bay although the company is continuing to make a maximum effort to
