State Liquor Commission 25 Years Old

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Saturday wound up the first 25 years of business for the Oregon Liquor Control Commission.

It has sold three quarters of a billion dollars worth of liquor in those 25 years and has transferred to welfare and other funds 205 million dollars in profits.

The commission was organized in January, 1934, but did not open its first store until Feb. 15.

From that day, through last Dec. 31 when the annual totaling of sales was made, Oregon cities received $14,236,391; counties were enriched by $10,327,865; welfare, relief and similar funds received $73,608,603; and the state's general fund received $107,630,360

The commission had on hand nearly two millions more ready for distribution, had another two million in fixed assets and carried 8¾ million in reserve for working capital.

C. G. Van Bergen, administrator, said that since the first year of OLCC operation the number of state liquor stores had increased from 25 to 33, and the number of agencies from 90 to 144.

The number of employes was 167 the first year, rose to 594 in 1948, and has been cut back now to 392. Van Bergen credited the reduction in employes largely to more efficient handling methods in the present one-story warehouse over those used in the old multi-floor warehouse.

He said there also had been some overstaffing in stores, which was eliminated, and a cut-back made in enforcement personnel as local officials took over more of the enforcement work.

State Rests Presentation In Cattle Rustling Trial

The rustling trial of Paul Robert Wilson enters its second week Monday with the bulk of the defense presentation still to come.

During Friday's session the state rested its case after calling 16 witnesses to the stand, Judge David R. Vandenberg denied two defense motions that would have ended the trial, and five witnesses opened the defense case.

Motions by which the defense attempted to end the trial were:

A motion for a directed verdict of acquittal on the ground the state failed to present sufficient evidence to support a charge that Wilson, 29-year-old Fort Klamath rancher, stole a black, white-faced cow belonging to Lorenz G. VanderKamp of Chiloquin.

A motion for dismissal of the charge on the ground that the cow named in the indictment was not the same cow shown by physical evidence.

The last motion was based by Defense Attorneys Glenn D. Ramirez and Joseph O. Stearns on location of the VK connected brand on the animal. The indictment placed the brand on the right shoulder. The defense contended the brand was on the right ribs.

VanderKamp was questioned closely by Stearns last week on location of the brand. He said the brand was on a far part of the shoulder because the cow was difficult to brand, but he said any cattleman would describe the brand as a "shoulder brand."

At that time the defense maintained the brand was too far back to be described as a shoulder brand.

The last three state witnesses called by District Attorney Arthur Beddoe were county cattlemen who testified on another mark on the cow, a blotched brand on the right side farther back than the VK mark. The state maintains that that brand is Wilson's RW brand; the defense contends it is not. The three witnesses, who said they thought it was a smeared RW brand, were Thomas Lacey and Louis Hill of Merrill and Albert Wampler of Rocky Point.

Brand location came into evidence immediately after the defense opened its presentation when Don Kirk of Chiloquin was asked by Ramirez to sketch and name the basic parts of a cow—head, shoulder, ribs, etc.

Other defense witnesses to appear were Kirk's father, Francis Kirk, a former state livestock inspector; and three ranchers, Grover Clarkson of Chiloquin, Blaine Brattain of Fort Klamath and James Dyke of Klamath Falls.

Among witnesses who appeared for the state before Beddoe rested the state's case were Spencer Younce, Columbia County sheriff; Bert Wheeler of Boring and Everett Malone, of Klamath Falls, livestock investigators; Arnold Pleasant of Clatskanie, a truck driver, and the three county ranchers, Long, Hill and Wampler.

The state charged Wilson and his 35-year-old assistant, Eldon Lyle Shafer, of stealing several cattle from Klamath County ranchers and removing them to the ranch of Mrs. Vivian Burns near Rainier. Shafer was convicted of the charge involving the VanderKamp cow and was sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary.

Other trials against the defendants are pending.

EDWIN J. STASTNY JR. shows his father the inscription which Capt. N. B. Lanning, first commander of the atomic submarine Seawolf, wrote on a photograph of the famous ship. Ed had just returned from hobnobbing with President Eisenhower and other celebrities as one of 12 members of the Report to the Nation Committee of the Boy Scouts of America.

Malin Scout Meets President

By LAMAR HOOVER

Boy Scout Week, which has just been celebrated by 2,048 boys in the 68 units of the scouts' Klamath District along with their fellows across the nation, was "brought home" Thursday afternoon when Edwin J. Stastny Jr. returned to his home in Malin after meeting President Eisenhower in Washington.

Stastny was one of 12 Explorer Scouts selected to present the Boy Scouts of America's annual Report to the Nation to Eisenhower, its honorary president. He spent 12 days meeting with high level members of government, the armed forces and volunteer agencies in New York and Washington.

The Explorers also spent three nights and two days at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York, participating in normal cadet activities with individual cadet escorts. This experience, meeting the President, and his visit to Rockefeller Center were highlights of a trip on which almost everything was exceptional.

Stastny and his 11 companions spent nearly 20 minutes with the President last Wednesday morning. After meeting and shaking hands with all the boys, Eisenhower talked with them about their trip, particularly the visit to West Point. Stastny said that West Point seemed to be a fine place, but that he wouldn't look forward to "plebe week."

"It's not as bad as all that," Ike replied.

The President showed the Explorers a clock on his desk designed to show the time at any place in the world. Then photographers came in for a few minutes of picture-taking.

The group spent the rest of the day at the Pentagon, meeting such celebrities as Air Force Vice Chief of Staff General Curtis LeMay; Hugh M. Milton, assistant secretary of the Army (who gave them "Explorer" satellite tie clasps); William B. Franke, undersecretary of the Navy; and Capt. N. B. Lanning, former commander of the Seawolf, who autographed a picture of that atomic submarine.

This wound up Stastny's Washington visit. With happy memories and a deep cough he had picked up in the course of his travels, he took off for home. It happened that Klamath Falls was weathered in when his plane was due to arrive, so Ed landed at Medford and greeted his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Stastny, about three hours later at the Klamath Falls bus depot.

Stastny's New York visit had begun February 2, when the group visited the Explorers Club, meeting Dick Cahppell, the youngest member of the club, who went to the South Pole with Dr. Paul Siple, when a Boy Scout.

Returning to New York Thursday, the group toured the United Nations, the Esso Safety Foundation, and Rockefeller Center. They were guests of officials of the center and of Radio City Music Hall at a performance at the famous theater, then had dinner with a group of Boy Scout officials.

On Friday the boys went to New Brunswick, New Jersey, national Boy Scout headquarters, and had lunch with Dr. Arthur A. Schuck, chief scout executive. A train stopped specially at New Brunswick to take them to Washington where they arrived Friday night in time to make a lecture at the National Geographic Society given by Sr. Vivian Fuchs, first man to cross the Antarctic continent.

On Saturday, they went on a sightseeing tour of Washington, and on Sunday they spent a day at Annapolis, attending chapel at the Naval Academy, with an individual midshipman escort.

On Monday, the Explorers began the day at a "logger's breakfast," sponsored by a lumbermen's organization, where Ed sat next to Emmett E. Stoddard, director of field services of the West Coast Lumbermen's Association of Portland. They were guests of President Melville Bell Grosvenor at the National Geographic Society, and luncheon guests of the administrator of civil defense. Stastny said they had a "grand time" in the afternoon as guests of Supreme Court Justice (and Eagle Scout) Tom C. Clark, who gave them replicas of quill pens formerly used in the court, and showed them through the building.

At Tuesday's "Washington Breakfast," Ed sat between a representative of the sponsoring organization of his post, and Rep. Al Ullman. Because Explorer Post 13 is sponsored by the Malin Fire Department, and Ed was the first Report to the Nation Explorer from a post sponsored by a volunteer fire department, this had created a problem. The representative obtained was Chief R. C. Malmquist of Minneapolis, president of the International Association of Fire Chiefs, who came specially to Washington for the occasion.

At this breakfast Stastny made a report on "Jamborees," the subject assigned to him by the National Council. The rest of Tuesday morning was spent with Chief U. E. Baughman of the Secret Service, who escorted the boys to the White House for a visit to the President's press conference. Afterwards, they were luncheon guests at the Philippine Embassy where Mrs. Carlos P. Romulo was hostess at a typical Philippine meal. In the afternoon, they went to FBI headquarters and met Director J. Edgar Hoover.

Girl, 16, Held In Slaying At Alturas

ALTURAS — A 16-year-old girl was held under hospital guard Saturday for investigation in the pistol slaying of her father.

Police identified the girl as Pauline Dixon, 16.

Officers said the father, Archie Dixon, 39, was killed between midnight and 12:30 a.m. Saturday, when all six shots of a .22 caliber Smith and Wesson pistol were emptied into his body.

They said the girl was being held without charge in Modoc County Medical Center. Assistant District Attorney Boyd Wilson was quoted that the girl faced possible charges of justifiable patricide.

The shooting was investigated by Wilson, the Modoc County Sheriff's office and Alturas City Police.

Investigators said the girl and her father were watching television just before the shooting. The girl's mother and two other children were asleep in the house.

All six shots from the pistol struck the victim, officers said. The fatal shot struck Dixon in the chest just above the heart.

The shooting occurred in the family home in the Berry Addition of Alturas.

Wilson said a formal charge would follow a coroner's inquest scheduled for Monday or Tuesday.

Dixon reportedly had been working in Malin.

Stamp Artist Joins Fete

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The men responsible for Oregon's centennial commemorative stamp came to join in dedicating it at the site of the first post office west of the Rocky Mountains.

L. Rohe Walter, special assistant to the postmaster general, came from Washington, D.C., to represent the Post Office Department and explain that in the stamp an effort was made "to symbolize the history, the beauty and the richness of Oregon."

With him came Robert Hallock of Newtown, Mass., the artist who designed the stamp with its depiction of Mt. Hood and a pioneer's covered wagon at the end of the trail.

With him, too, came members of the Citizens Stamp Advisory Committee.

After first-day sales at Astoria Saturday, the green 4-cent stamp will go on sale at the 26,000 postoffices throughout the country. One hundred and twenty million of them were printed.

Volunteer Prisoner Waives Forgery Case To Jury

Jerry Silva, a Klamath Falls man who turned himself in to the Humbolt County (Eureka) California sheriff last week after confirming that he was wanted in Klamath County, was held to the grand jury Friday.

Silva, 41, 616 Adams Street, was charged with forgery involving a worthless $102 check cashed at Fran's Food Store, 147 East Main Street, February 4. He waived preliminary hearing in district court Friday and was returned to jail here in lieu of $4,000 bail.

The district attorney's office said Silva also admitted passing a $108 check in Medford, and implicated two other men, Truman (Jack) Thurman and his brother-in-law, Cecil Worthington.

Those men faced charges in Jackson County. Thurman was charged there with obtaining money by false pretenses and Worthington was placed on a year's probation after conviction on a misdemeanor charge.

Other district court action Friday:

Warren M. Ruff, 30-year-old Chiloquin resident charged with second degree murder in the rifle death of his wife Agatha February 7, requested a preliminary hearing which was set for February 20. Ruff was represented by Joseph O. Stearns of Portland.

GOP Women Meet In April In Washington

The seventh annual Conference of Republican Women will be held in Washington, D.C. April 12, 13, 14, according to information received by Mrs. Lois Erickson, vice chairman of the Klamath County Republican Central Committee.

This annual conference has attracted approximately 1,500 women from all parts of the United States each year, and is open to anyone who may be interested in attending. Should Klamath County women be interested, contact with a known Oregonian in Washington is a help in getting oriented.

Cabinet officers and high ranking government officials are to be featured speakers at workshops, luncheons and dinners. In recent years Oregon has sent a young college Republican to these annual workshops, and an appeal is being made by Mrs. Collis Moore, Republican National Committeewoman, for assistance in financing such a project again this year. These trips have proven to be of great value to the work of the Young Republican organization.

Mrs. Marshall E. Cornett, former Republican National Committeewoman, attended these annual conferences for several years and reports they are both interesting and informative, and worth the time for anyone interested in the work of the Republican party.

POSSIBLE CANCER CAUSE

LONDON (UPI) — Professor F. C. Pybus, a leading British surgeon, warned today that smoke from burning leaves and garden rubbish are possible causes of cancer.

Pybus, professor emeritus of surgery at the University of Durham, wrote in the magazine the Medical Press that, "the smoke from these smouldering heaps is darker, more irritating, generally foul smelling and, as might be expected, contains benzpyrene, a suspected cancer agent."

Phone Clerk Parlayed Pay To $2½ Million

CHILLICOTHE Ohio (AP) — The big mystery in this city today is how did a 92-year-old spinster parlay her meager earnings as a telephone company clerk into a fortune of 2½ million dollars.

Before Miss Margaret Ritter died last Jan. 20, her neighbors knew her as a thrifty woman who wore patched dresses, lived alone in a modest frame home and "hated to spend a dime."

They knew she had money, maybe $100,000, perhaps even $200,000.

But even her nephew and niece, to whom she left the major share of her huge estate, were flabbergasted at the amount.

"We had no idea she had that much money," said the nephew, Andrew I. Ritter of Dayton, a 61-year-old Associated Press employe.

And his sister, Mrs. Elsie Marie Wallace of Cleveland, the other chief beneficiary, echoed that sentiment. "We knew Miss Ritter had money," she said, "but we didn't realize there was that much."

The bulk of the estate is in securities except for the woman's home here, according to Gordon M. Graham, co-executor.

An inventory filed in Probate Court listed the estate at $2,456,946.

Shasta Train Service Cut In ICC Hands

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The Interstate Commerce Commission Saturday had under submission Southern Pacific's request to reduce service of its Shasta Daylight to three times a week during winter.

A stormy four-day hearing ended Friday. ICC Examiner Paul C. Albus will make a recommendation to the commission, which will announce its decision by early May. Albus is to receive written briefs in March.

During the hearing, the railroad argued that it is losing $1,900,000 on the daily Portland to San Francisco train. Passenger traffic dropped 19 per cent southbound and 11 per cent northbound last year, according to SP.

The Public Utilities Commissions of California and Oregon, along with 10 railroad labor groups, fought the proposed schedule cuts with allegations that the railroad was deliberately discouraging travelers with an eye toward eventually abandoning the Shasta completely.

An Oregon PUC official, speaking outside the hearing, even alleged that the proposed reduction was just one step in a SP master plan towards getting rid of all passenger trains.

During the hearing, a California expert asserted that the railroad was only losing $72,000 after taxes on the Shasta.

The SP called rebuttal witnesses Friday. Charles B. Nmes, company analyst, said the difference in loss figures stemmed from the problem of how much over-all costs should be allocated to the Shasta Daylight when the railroad's profits and losses were added up.

Other witnesses denied charges that both ticket service for the Shasta and service on the train itself had been deliberately worsened to discourage passengers.

Three Crime Ring Juveniles Make Court Appearances

Three of nine Klamath Falls youths named by state and city police in exposure of a juvenile crime ring made court appearances Friday, the day the crackdown was revealed.

Officers said the other six youths, ranging from 14 to 19, would face court appearances later.

Two statements in the Herald and News story Friday were not correct. These said that books stolen from KUHS lockers were found in the home of Donald Berg, 1916 Harriman Street, and that Emerson Jerome Adams, Route 3, was involved when diesel fuel was poured on Route 66 near Keno.

Police said Berg admitted entering school lockers and that Adams was involved in other crimes, but that no books were found in the Berg home and that Adams was not linked in the fuel dumping.

Otherwise, police confirmed, the story was correct.

The youths admitted more than 15 individual crimes and 20 cases of vandalism involving thousands of dollars worth of stolen goods and property damage.

The three who appeared in court Friday were:

Douglas Scott McCornack, 17, 2571 Lakeshore Drive, sentenced by Juvenile Judge Charles L. Foster to an indefinite term in McLaren School for Boys at Woodburn.

Thomas Earl James, 17, 1936 Harriman Street, to be sentenced at 9:30 a.m. Monday by District Judge D. E. Van Vactor.

Loren Jurgensen, 18, 1710 Oregon Avenue, also to be sentenced Monday by Judge Van Vactor.

James and Jurgensen pleaded guilty to charges of petty larceny in district court. James was transferred to district court after first being heard in juvenile court.

During James' arraignment before Judge Van Vactor, in the presence of his parents, the youth admitted additional crimes and admitted he had been in trouble before.

Asked why he continued to break the law, the boy told the judge that authorities "never did bear down on me."

The boy agreed with the judge's estimate that the goods he had stolen were worth, conservatively, more than $1,000. Asked why he continued to run around with boys who pressured him into thievery, the boy replied, "I liked to be a member of the gang."

It was during the James boy's hearing that McCornack's sentence was mentioned in court.

Officers said the investigation, which so far has involved nine youths in thefts of auto parts, oxygen tanks, safety lights, school books, fire extinguishers, batteries, tires, wheels and a bewildering assortment of other goods—as well as numerous cases of window breaking and vandalism — was by no means complete.

Panel Ends Berlin Study

WASHINGTON (AP)—A panel of Western diplomatic specialists has concluded two weeks of intensive study on the problem of Germany and the Soviet threat to Berlin.

The 20-man panel, representing the United States, Britain, France and West Germany, wound up the study Friday. They will meet again in Paris around March 1.

The group's chief task was said to be the drafting of a reply to Russia's Jan. 10 note calling for a German peace conference. The draft was completed last Tuesday and has been submitted to members of the North Atlantic Alliance.

As the panel ended its study, dispatches from West Germany reported that bitter words between that country's two major political parties have dimmed prospects for a bipartisan policy on Berlin.

Valdemar von Knoeringen, deputy chairman of the opposition Socialists, touched it off Monday by calling defense minister Franz Josef Strauss "political enemy number one."

Strauss, at a rally of the ruling Christian Democrats retorted Wednesday that Von Knoeringen used "Nazi-style methods against his political opponents."
