THE GALL BLADDER AN IMPORTANT ORGAN

By Dr. C. W. Davis

The gall bladder is a small but highly important organ. Bile is manufactured continuously by the liver and emptied into the gall bladder which acts as a reservoir. Here water and certain valuable materials found in the bile are absorbed by the blood to be used again by the body, and the bile becomes highly concentrated. During digestion the bile is forced into the intestine and aids in the digestion of fats, also it has a bactericidal action and lubricates the intestine.

The gall bladder has a chemical and nervous control both under the central nervous system. Pressure on the nerve by certain vertebrae can cause it to function abnormally, cause the formation of gall stones, or predispose it to infection. Adjustments by a Chiropractor will restore normal function and under ordinary circumstances will expel the debris into the intestine.

This is one of a series of Chiropractic educational advertisements appearing in this paper through the courtesy of Dr. C. W. Davis, D.C., N.D. 134 North 3rd St., Klamath Falls, Oregon. TU 4-6003. Adv.
