Yates quintet as they rolled over the San Francisco Warriors, 62-50 in the opening game of the evening session of the All-Indian Tournament in progress at the Chiloquin High School gymnasium.

Scotty's BARKS 'N' BITES
By WAYNE SCOTT

The job of being a sportswriter is often times just that — a job.

There also are times, however, when it becomes a privilege.

And for this one's dough, being able to attend an Oregon State Prep A-1 Basketball Tournament is an assignment that easily falls into the latter category.

Sometimes it's hard to imagine that someone would pay you to take in a spectacle such as the yearly classic at McArthur Court — but just the same it happens. In fact, in just the opening day of play this year 1,500 people that did just that; paid for the chance to be on hand. Vacations were saved up... who ever heard of taking a vacation in March... non-basketball fans might scratch their heads in wonder.

From our town alone nearly 400 Pelican followers begged, pleaded, contrived, caajoled, flattered or else just plain took-off just to be here to share in the wonderment, glory, sadness and excitement that 160 kids, 16 teams of the state's finest athletes, experienced in the quest for the elusive gold cup that accompanies the state crown and the right to be known as champion.

It's been that way for years past—and it will stay that way for years to come. And I'm glad.

On the off-chance that the boss may have quit reading by this time, I'll hazard the comment: "I'd probably make the trip each year on my own hook, gratis yet."

I might even buy a ticket to get in—and remember—I've been a Scotsman for lo "these many years."

Some odds and ends noted from the press row at McArthur Court... the section of seats most nearly filled for every game on the big five-day agenda here at the tournament is just beneath the press row... a sea of crew cuts, some grey, some with spots shining with the reflection of the lights overhead, some purely defenestration mechanisms fighting man's ever present battle with the receding hairline, some thick and bristly with the enthusiasm and strength of youth... all belonging to the coaching fraternity. Guys taking a busman's holiday. Football coaches, baseball coaches, track coaches, wrestling coaches, tennis coaches, athletic directors, and yes, even basketball coaches, some whose teams didn't make the tournament and some whose did. The latter sweating out a prospective opponent.

They work with the kids day in and day out, off season and on, and so what do they do on spring vacation? Come to the tournament of course—and build dream teams... renew acquaintanceships... meet new friends... note the talent, and the weaknesses... compare notes and strategies... say "I told you so"—watch this boy, he's a comer—"I knew it all the time"... and then when it's all over they return to their respective jobs, ready to begin a new, strangely wondering to themselves, "Do you suppose if I could get all the kids in school out for my sport or Andy's, Jim's, Dean's, etc., we would have a juvenile delinquency problem?"

Bless 'em.

By the time this gets in print there are going to be some teams entered at Eugene that will have dropped by the wayside and will be starting the long trek home. If it's any consolation... there were sixteen teams in the tourney... only one can be champion—but think how many other teams in the state that weren't quite good enough to even get here.

A moment ago, I mentioned how I see a face-ful that can compare to yours truly.
