Horse Star Visits Here

Pretty Buck, a movie star, is getting to be a mighty traveled horse. He came to Klamath Falls Wednesday from Sacramento to ballyhoo his latest film, "Sad Horse," which premiered Wednesday night at the Tower Theater as well as in 19 other theaters in Oregon and California.

When the crowds that came to see him and the picture cleared, Pretty Buck was loaded by his two handlers back into his personal trailer and rolled off to Eureka for the second of a long string of planned appearances.

Buck plays Northwind, a speedy but sentimental racehorse in the film. As the story goes, the horse comes into the money, but hits the skids when a companion, a dog, dies. The horse is sent to a trainer somewhere out in the country, whose grandson has a dog.

Horse and dog befriend each other, and horse is again off to the races.

It's termed a film for general family enjoyment by Tower Theater Manager James Gellatly. The run ends Saturday.
