His subject was entitled "Christian Science: A Fresh Approach to Security."

He was introduced to the audience by Mrs. Grace Foster, second reader of the local church. Mr. Wallach opened his address with a discussion of the "battle for men's minds," the great barrage of propaganda being directed today at the individual.

He told his audience that the basis for all security, security from illness and suffering, from sin and failure, from loss and accident, is an understanding of God, divine Life, Truth and Love.

In closing Mr. Wallach added, "You will find that you are not fooled by the disturbing pictures of insecurity with which mortal mind manages to frighten itself. And you will find that the understanding of God's ever-nearness and power equips you with the unfailing ability to know that you do indeed possess sovereign power to think and act rightly, and that nothing can dispossess you of this heritage, and trespass on love."

Meditations For Lent

By THE REV.
EDWIN T. DAHLBERG, D.D.
Pastor of the Delmar Baptist Church, St. Louis, Missouri

Matthew 26:36. "But the angel said to the women, 'Do not be afraid; for I know that you seek Jesus who was crucified. He is not here; for he has risen, as he said. Come, see the place where he lay.'"

Emily Dickinson once wrote a poem in which she said, "The only news to me is bulletins all day. From Immortality."

What a refreshing thought! All day long we listen to news bulletins over the radio and TV concerning robberies, fires, murders, highway accidents, world wars and revolutions. But do we ever listen to a news bulletin from Immortality?

Easter is such a news bulletin. It reminds us that a message has come to us from across the visible border of life: "Christ is Risen!"

These are undoubtedly the mightiest words in history. From them have come all the most glorious aspects of our Christian civilization that we know—the Christian church itself, with all its rich variety of denominations, churches, missions, and cathedrals; all that we possess of Christian music and art, in the way of paintings, organs, choirs, church bells, hymns and anthems; the writings of the New Testament, and all that is immortal in Christian literature; our Christian homes, hospitals, schools, and democratic ideals; above all, the millions of redeemed lives that rejoice in their deliverance from sin, death, and frustration. We are not unmindful of the contribution of other religions and philosophies. But the words, "Christ is risen," have shaken life to its very foundations, and taken empires off their hinges.

Halford E. Luccock tells the story of a man who saw the Grand Canyon of the Colorado for the first time. Standing in awe before this stupendous spectacle he said reverently, "Something must have happened here." This deep cut was not caused by a wandering Indian dragging a stick along the ground.

Neither can we attribute the mighty effects of Christ's resurrection in human history to the imagination of a few bewildered disciples. The impact of Easter upon the life of mankind is too significant to be explained away. Before the empty tomb of Jesus we must say, too, "something happened here."

Something is still happening. There are more missionaries going out to all nations of the earth with the good news of Christ today than at any time in the history of Christendom. Here at home, more churches are being built than ever before. Why should this be? This would not happen if Jesus of Nazareth were only a dead carpenter buried near some Galilean shore.

However bowed down you may be in sorrow, however helpless you may feel yourself to be in your present circumstances of life, listen once again to the Bulletin from Immortality: "Christ is Risen!" For this is the news of victory. The decisive battle has been won. Christ has abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light. Why not enter that life today?

Prayer: "For all the saints who from their labors rest, who Thee by faith before the world confessed, Thy Name, O Jesus, be forever blessed. Alleluia! Alleluia!"—William W. How, 1823-1897.
