

MANY OF THE 44 BUILDINGS proposed for use as a four-county youth camp at Newell in Modoc County are in good repair and quantities of equipment are still housed at the site of the former Army headquarters at the Japanese War Relocation Center, six miles south of Tulelake. A survey of the Army area, 23 acres now under heavy fence, revealed that conversion to use as such a camp could be accomplished without great cost to the four interested counties, Shasta, Tehama, Butte and Siskiyou. The present camp site, under the jurisdiction of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, will revert June 30 to the U. S. Bureau of Reclamation. The government lease expires on that date. Location of such a camp at Newell was proposed by Earl Ager of Tulelake, Siskiyou County supervisor, when officials of the four counties sought a location for a camp for boys from 15 to 18 who need guidance after first delinquencies. The camp includes a superintendent's residence, duplex accommodations, large dining hall, kitchen with much of the equipment intact, 2,000 mattresses, 600 steel cots, bales of wool blankets, walk-in refrigeration facilities for meat, fruits and vegetables, electric power, sewer and water systems, fire fighting equipment, plenty of room for recreation facilities and other appurtenances favorable to easy conversion to immediate use. Following withdrawal of Army units at the close of World War II, the area was taken over by the Bureau of Prisons and has been kept in repair in anticipation of future need during the present unsettled world conditions. Cost of rehabilitation of the camp would be far less, county authorities say than the building of a new camp at some other location. Left photograph shows David Morgan, caretaker, and his favorite boxer dog, in the building where the mattresses are stored. At center is a view of the camp taken by Otto Ellis, Herald and News photographer, from a vantage point on the peninsula. Buildings, right foreground, are the Army units. Those at left show Newell community, including the Newell Elementary School. Far right photo is view of part of dining hall and kitchen.

Unfinished Business Bottleneck In Salem

SALEM — The target date for adjournment of the 50th Oregon Legislature is three weeks from Saturday. The Legislature still has a lot of unfinished business, and it will be lucky to finish by the end of April.

Senate President Walter Pearson (D-Portland) and House Speaker Robert Duncan (D-Medford) fixed the April 18 target date. But the difficult budget problem still is far from solved.

Here is the status of major legislation:

Higher Education — The legislature is faced with difficult problems in the higher education and welfare budgets.

It also is faced with demands for higher salaries for state employees. There has been no action on the big budgets yet.

Taxation — The House Taxation Committee is withholding action on the income tax bills to find out from the Ways and Means Committee if new tax revenue will be necessary.

Pearson received strong support for his bill to ask the people if they want a three per cent sales tax, but that would solve the problem of the 1961 Legislature, not this one.

The House has voted to increase income taxes on utilities one million dollars a year, and the Senate has approved a bill to assess utility property 30 per cent higher than other property.

The cigarette tax proposals apparently are dead. Nothing has been done yet on reduction of the capital gains tax.

Buildings — Faced with demands for 30 million dollars worth of institution and college buildings, the Ways and Means Committee probably will recommend submitting to the people a bond issue for long-range building plans. It hopes to find a little money for emergency building needs.

Education — Measures to increase basic school aid were approved this week by the House and Senate Education committees, but they probably will die in the Ways and Means Committee.

The House Education Committee plans to approve next week a proposal for an interim committee to study distribution of school funds.

Nothing has been done about the future of Oregon Technical Institute.

Highways and Motor Vehicles — The bill to increase the six-cent gas tax to seven cents died in the House Highways Committee this week. The same committee probably will vote for 24 million dollars in bonds to construct the Astoria Bridge, but will make it contingent on the state of Washington paying half the cost. This committee has approved a bill reducing truck taxes $800,000 a year. The house voted for the bill to require that automobile liability insurance policies carry clauses protecting the insured against bodily injury caused by uninsured motorists. There has been no action on legislation to require every automobile owner to carry liability insurance.

Labor — The bill which repeals the 1953 law against organizational picketing has been signed by the governor. There has been no action on a measure to require unions to account for their funds and to hold democratic elections of union officers.

Migrant Labor — The House approved the bill setting up minimum health conditions in farm labor camps.

Unemployment Compensation — The Senate has passed bills to substitute a single director for the three-member Unemployment Compensation Commission, and extend coverage to employers of one person.

Reorganization — The House passed this week the bill to permit the governor to submit reorganization plans for state agencies to the Legislature. The House State and Federal Affairs Committee recommended that the Board of Control be abolished.

Power — Nothing has been done about the bill to create a state power commission to buy, generate and sell power.

Skate Heads Home After Missile Test

WASHINGTON (AP)—The nuclear submarine Skate is heading homeward today after dramatically proving that atomic subs can maneuver under Arctic ice within missile range of the Soviet Union any time of the year.

The Navy said the Skate completed a 12-day voyage under the Polar ice cap—and in the process smashed through the ice several times to come to the surface. The Navy mentioned only the scientific aspects of the trip but the military significance was obvious.

The 267-foot submarine surfaced 10 times during its 3,000 polar journey—either in open rifts in the ice or through thin spots in the ice pack. Once, on March 17, the Skate surfaced exactly at the North Pole.

The Skate, which made a similar trip last summer, is now headed for New London, Conn., the same base from which it departed several weeks ago. Until it arrives there April 6 full details of the voyage will not be known.

The Navy insisted the trip was a "scientific exploratory voyage" to obtain data on under-ice conditions in winter temperatures and to chart the bottom of the Arctic Ocean.

All this, of course, is information that would be vital for wartime use of missile submarines, which are expected to join the fleet later next year.

Cmdr. R. B. McWethy, operations officer for the Atlantic Submarine Command, said the Navy deliberately chose the worst time of the year for the trip—when the Arctic ice is heaviest and surface temperatures are the coldest.

LOST SUBPENA

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI) — The courthouse subpoena was missing Saturday, apparently lost in the confusion of moving to the new Mobile County courthouse.

Subpena is the pet cat of the courthouse crowd.

Death Blamed On Line Users

LA PUENTE, Calif. (AP) — A La Puente woman says party-line talkers refused to let her make an emergency call even though she informed them her husband was dying.

Mrs. Madeline Uranga told sheriff's deputies Friday that she finally made the call from a neighbor's telephone—resulting in a 22-minute delay.

By the time an ambulance got her husband, Gene, 48, to the hospital he was dead of an apparent heart attack, Mrs. Uranga said.

Convicts were sent to West Australia for the first time in 1850 to supply a desperate need for laborers.

One Safe Robbery, Two Relocations Memories Of Retiring Bly Postmaster

By ROBERTA MCGEE

BLY — The community of Bly will honor its postmaster, Mrs. Georgia Casebeer, with a farewell open house party April 5, at the Bly School home economics room from 4 to 6 p.m.

The public is invited to attend, and refreshments will be served. This occasion is sponsored by the Bly clubs and organizations and business establishments.

Mrs. Casebeer will start her retirement after serving the community of Bly faithfully for 25 years.

Mrs. Casebeer took over the management of the Bly Post Office December 18, 1933. She was acting postmaster until August 1934, when she received her first appointment signed by James A. Farley, then postmaster general of the United States.

In April 1938, she received her second appointment signed by President Franklin Delano Roosevelt. In July of 1942 received her third and last appointment, which was also signed by President Roosevelt.

The post office outgrew two buildings since she was appointed postmaster. Mrs. Casebeer purchased the present building in January 1950 to have a place large enough and warm enough to work in. The location of the post office also was much improved in this last move.

Mrs. Casebeer recalls trying to sort and put out the mail with both she and her assistant wearing their coats and gloves when they were in the second building.

"It was terrible, so cold one couldn't even think," exclaimed Mrs. Casebeer. The move brought comfort, as they were able to it is always cool inside the building.

A robbery occurred at the post office in September, 1954. The back door was pried open with an iron bar, and it was locked again, when she came to work the next morning. A small, old fashioned safe was taken and its contents. It was later found by a stockman of the vicinity, about 10 miles from the post office with the door blown off and contents taken. The safe was nearly buried in the ground amid a clump of brush. There was very little money acquired by this stunt; who could expect money amounting to any amount in such a small community as Bly?

It was not long afterwards that the post office was supplied with a large fire safe. It is certain no one will cart it out the back door and load it onto a pickup truck and run off with it. The new safe was so heavy that it couldn't possibly be carried in, so a call was made to Don McGee, who operates the Bly Lumber Company. He came with one of his hysting machines and unloaded it to the back porch; then it took two men several hours to roll it into the office by inches.

"All told, it has been quite a nice job," stated Mrs. Casebeer, and I'm glad I had the opportunity to serve such a wonderful community.

"But I also will be glad for the freedom, so that I can do some of the many things I've wanted to do these past 25 years, such as going outside to enjoy the sunny days of springtime, sleep in the mornings, if I so desire, and not have to watch the clock. Won't that be fun!"

Clergy Credits Graham Crusade

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Australian churchmen today credited evangelist Billy Graham's Melbourne crusade with the record attendance at Friday's Good Friday services.

Ministers of several denominations said Graham's visit had made more persons willing to go to church than ever before.

More than 500 persons were turned away from Sydney's biggest movie theater during the showing of "Fire on the Heathen," the filmed record of Graham's crusade in Scotland in 1955.

LEVANT'S CONDITION

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Humorist Oscar Levant told his wife on his local TV show Friday night that his physical condition is rapidly deteriorating.

"I tried to choke you the other night," he laughed, "but you thought I was giving you a sweet, fond embrace."

There are 28 glaciers, some of which are 500 feet thick, in the Mount Rainier National Park in west central Washington.
