Every Home a Picture

"Good morning, Mrs. Dill. I'm Fascia from 'Your House and Mine.' As you know, your new home has been selected as our next 'Home of the Month.' That's our little feature where we show readers what young couples like you and Mr. Dill have been able to do to your home in a few week ends with moderate means.

"Our photographers and researchers will be here later; I always come early to get things started. . . So this is your living room. Very nice! But those drapes, Mrs. Dill—you'll have to replace that print with something plain. Print will clash with the wallpaper we're putting over your walnut paneling. Don't worry about your furniture. We'll just shove yours out on the lawn while we take our interiors.

"And that built-in range and oven will have to go. We featured one of those last month. Would you buy a lot of bric-a-brac to hang on your kitchen walls? We want that Early American look. A big china tureen would be nice, too—with lots of turkeys and stuff hand-painted on it. And, oh, yes, a fine sterling silver meat platter to dress up the dining room. . .

"What! A blue bathroom! Mrs. Dill, that will never do! Our editor abhors blue. We'll paint it rose.

"Now, do we have everything straight, Mrs. Dill? Carpenter and painters here on Tuesday, paperhangers Wednesday. On Thursday, the bulldozers will fix up the lot, and we'll deliver two carloads of rock. It helps our caption writers no end to be able to say the house was designed around a problem lot. Our Mrs. Hybrid in Gardening is pushing dandelions this month, so, of course, we'll have to rip out all those other things.

"Our readers are certainly going to get a kick out of seeing what you and Mr. Dill have done for this place in a few spare week ends, right, Mrs. Dill?"

—William G. Buck

"If you could have two wishes," a young lady asked her friend, "what would they be?"

"Well," replied the other girl, "I'd wish for a husband."

"That's only one wish," said the first girl.

"Well, I'd save the other until I saw how he turned out."
