

Solon Proves Fancy Dan

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — A Republican state senator from Westerly, R.I., boasts a wardrobe that would make any U.S. Senator envious.

Tis Beau Brummel is Antonio C. Trovato, who says he wishes his colleagues weren't so casual toward their attire.

Trovato, who owns 23 suits, dozen hats (including a fur Yukon cap), and seven fancy vests, says that "being a legislator is a high position and the members of the General Assembly should take greater pride in the way they dress."

He's also critical of newsmen who appear in the chamber "dressed in untasteful sports jackets, store-bought."

The youthful senator can well afford to be critical, however. In private life he's a custom tailor.

THE LONELY VIGIL of a fisherman is the same the world over. Here Ted Dunlap greets the early morning sun along the banks of Sonoma Creek, just outside the town of Sonoma in California, while waiting for an unwary steelhead to take his bait.

LOOKING MORE LIKE A DUCK HUNTER than a fisherman Ted Dunlap warily crouches above a pool on Sonoma Creek and waits for action from the steelhead. This picture was taken less than a mile from downtown Sonoma, within a hundred feet of a major county road. And yet the fishing is excellent when the fish are running.

KEEPING A CLOSE WATCH on a certain pool along Sonoma Creek are August Sebastiani, right, and Ted Dunlap. Both are ardent fishermen and know the stream like a book. August owns a large winery in Sonoma. Ted operates the 120-year-old Swiss Hotel there with his wife, Helen, and her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Marioni.
