Texas States Wildlife Meet

The 25th North American Wildlife Conference will be held next year in the Statler-Hilton Hotel, Dallas, Texas, on March 7, 8, and 9, according to the Wildlife Management Institute, sponsor of the large international conservation meetings. This announcement of the 1960 meeting site was made at the close of the successful 24th North American Wildlife Conference in New York City early this month.

More than 1,000 persons attended the New York meeting. Conference came from nearly all the states, including Alaska, and from Canada, Mexico, Africa, Scotland and Hawaii. More than 650 persons attended the annual conference banquet.

The theme of this year's conference was "Resources, People and Space." The more than 50 presentations at the three general and six technical sessions of the three-day meeting focused attention on specific natural resource issues as well as considerations for the restoration and improved management of water, wildlife, soil, and related resources.

Each of the presentations, the discussions that followed, and the names of all conference registrants were recorded and will appear in the printed Transactions of the 24th North American Wildlife Conference. Copies will be available upon publication at cost from the Wildlife Management Institute.

DIDN'T GO THE DISTANCE
POMONA, Calif. (UPI)—Several years ago, five of the eight jockeys in a two-mile race at the half-mile track here pulled up their horses after three laps, thinking the race was over.
