Paper Adds New Salesman

A new local display advertising salesman with the Herald and News, Jack R. Judd, assumed his duties on Thursday.

"The addition to the advertising sales force of the newspaper has been made in order to provide more complete service to the Klamath Basin business firms," stated J. A. McDonald, advertising manager of the Herald and News, in announcing the new salesman.

Judd comes to Klamath Falls from Bend where he was advertising manager of the Bend Bulletin for the last two and one-half years. Prior to that time, he had served for approximately two years as advertising manager of the Free Press at Nampa, Idaho.

He was born at Rupert, Idaho. After active duty with the Air Force in World War II, he returned to school and was graduated from Woodbury College at Los Angeles with a B.S. degree in commercial art.

His first newspaper job was with the Times-News at Twin Falls, Idaho, where he stayed for five years. He resigned to become a color-scale designer for Electrical Products Consolidated at Boise, Idaho, and then returned to the newspaper business.

Mr. and Mrs. Judd have two children, Sharon, 12, and Jack Jr., 10. They have purchased a home on Dahlia Street and the youngsters will finish their last six weeks of the current school year in Klamath Falls schools.

Death Penalty Abolition Under Assembly Scrutiny

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A modified bill to abolish the death penalty in California was given a 50-50 chance for survival today in the Assembly.

The bill by Assemblyman Lester A. McMillan (D-Los Angeles) would stop capital punishment on an eight-year trial basis.

On the eve of the lower house debate, McMillan said he had rounded up 39 votes, two short of the number needed for passage.

"Whether they'll stay with me I don't know," he said. "It will be close, there's no question about it."

McMillan said the swing votes were held by eight assemblymen, mostly first term lawmakers, who claimed they were "still on the fence."

Opponents of abolishment were reported to have been working in Assembly Monday in an attempt to capture the key votes.

Earlier, Assemblyman Walter I. Dahl (R-Oakland), chairman of the Republican caucus, said GOP legislators had voted "overwhelmingly" to battle the anti-death penalty bill. There are 33 Republicans in the 80-member Assembly.

The minority party caucus vote came before McMillan amended his bill to place an eight-year moratorium on the death penalty. In its original form, it would have abolished capital punishment outright.

In place of the death penalty, the measure provides for a life term sentence with no eligibility for parole until 10 years have been served. Parole then could be granted only with approval of all members of the Adult Authority and five of the justices of the California Supreme Court.

The amended McMillan bill was sent to the Assembly without recommendation after a brief hearing April 9 before the Ways and Means Committee.

The bill previously received, by a vote of 8-2, approval of the Assembly Crime Committee.

Arguments presented during a three-hour night committee hearing were substantially the same as those heard two years ago when a similar measure finally won As-
