Advice Given Skin Divers

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI)—The increasingly popular sport of "skin diving" can be extremely dangerous unless certain precautions are taken by the diver.

The careless or uninformed "frogman" could suffer serious injury or even paralysis through a failure to prevent the "bends," a condition caused by the formation of nitrogen bubbles in the body tissue during too rapid an ascent.

Navy Lt. Charles D. Glazard, a recognized medical expert on diving who is stationed aboard the submarine tender U.S.S. Nerius in San Diego Harbor, lists the following safety rules for divers:

Dive only when well rested and in perfect health. Never dive alone. Use gauges for diving time and depth. Never panic. Be thoroughly aware of decompression procedure. Never hold your breath when ascending or you may rupture your lungs. Use a face mask that covers both eyes and nose. And when in doubt—don't.

WESTERN PIONEER

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Alan Hale Jr. is so busy doing feature movies that he isn't seen often on TV. However, he'll appear soon as a heavy on a "Bat Masterson" show. It's almost ironic, Hale pointed out, because he was a TV pioneer seven years ago when he starred in the "Biff Baker" series.
