THIS DIVERSION DITCH was built by Neil Banta on his Antelope Valley ranch to protect meadow land from run-off water from above. The run-off from the slopes and draws above the meadow has been part of the cause of the high water table in the meadow lands. The diversion and a shallow drain down the middle of the meadow will take the excess water off without damage and allow for production of better quality hay crops. Neil built the ditch himself with a crawler tractor and small road grader. The ditch is about one and one-half feet deep with an eight foot flat bottom and gentle side slopes so that it can be mowed. The whole thing will be seeded to intermediate wheatgrass. Neil has recently completed a conservation plan for his ranch with provision for this and other diversions, the drainage ditch, clearing brush and seeding improved pasture grasses and management practices to improve his range and timber land. Soil Conservation Service technicians assisting Poe Valley Soil Conservation District helped him work out the plan, based on a complete soil survey.
