

Ingemar Johansson Warns Heavy King

NEW YORK—Swedish challenger Ingemar Johansson said today that after watching heavy-weight champion Floyd Patterson's performance against Brian London last week he is not worried about his own chances of taking the crown back to Sweden in June.

He also issued a bold warning: "All I have to say to the Champion Floyd Patterson is one thing, watch out!"

Johansson, who will fight Patterson in New York on June 25, is relying on several factors to win the title. His most important asset, he says, is that he's a "thinking boxer."

Johansson admitted that Patterson uses his head in the ring too but added that "there are times when he stops thinking, he gets overconfident and doesn't look close enough."

Johansson noted that during the London fight in Indianapolis Patterson was "very fast when he hits his combinations, but not so fast when he is making a left or a right alone. Then sometimes he looks at the floor instead and his punches are confused and wild."

Johansson said that Patterson is a different fighter now than he was when the Swedish slugger first saw him in the 1952 Olympics. "Then he was a stand-up fighter—just the kind people like to see—bang, bang, bang."

The challenger observed that there is something about Patterson's ring style now that "is not so good."

"Sometimes when he gets a little hit, he gets angry and then he pulls back and drops his hands as if to say I am going to kill that man. That is not so good."

Johansson said that he considers the capabilities of his right to be "almost mystic."

"There is something strange about my right hand, something very hard to explain. It is almost as if it were not part of me at all. I never know when it is coming. The arm works by itself. It is faster than the eye and I cannot even see it. Without my telling it to, the right goes and when it hits, there is this good feeling all down my arm and through my body. It is a wonderful feeling. Something just right has been done."

He said that the only thing he would be thinking of before going into the ring against Patterson is "how I will be hitting with my right hand; just right."

Johansson cited other reasons why he is confident of beating the champion. He said that he is faster than Patterson and that speed has always been his best tactic. He believes he can hit harder than Patterson and said his record of 13 knockouts in 21 fights shows "my hit is not weak."

He also considers himself to be in better shape than Patterson and said the reason for his never being hurt in the ring is because of his condition.

"When we are in the ring together," said Johansson, "if it happens like it happens in my mind, all I have to say to the Champion Floyd Patterson is one thing, watch out!"

He reported that his wife and trainer expect him to finish the fight in the first round.

Tow, Lift Men Schedule Meet

MOUNT SHASTA—A meeting of ski tow and lift operators of Northern California and Nevada will be held at Mt. Shasta Ski Bowl on Saturday and Sunday, May 9 and 10. Sixteen operators are expected to attend. The meeting will feature an operators giant slalom at 2 p.m. on Saturday. The rest of the meeting will be mostly social.

In connection with this meet will be a meeting of avalanche experts also at the Mt. Shasta Ski Bowl. Les Bodine, chairman of the avalanche committee, and Fletcher Hoyt, member of the committee, will instruct on all phases of avalanche control and management. These men will also demonstrate rescue missions on icy slopes, and discuss rescue problems. They will show avalanche movies at Mount Shasta High School on Saturday evening at 8:30.

Russ Seitzinger, 235-pound, 6-foot-5 Hardin-Simmons discus thrower, is from Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Russ Heman Throws Coast League No-No

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Russ Heman of the San Diego Padres gave the Pacific Coast League its first nine-inning no-hitter in 4½ years Thursday night, beating the Vancouver Mounties 2-0.

The victory moved the Padres to within one game of the league-leading Sacramento Solons, who dropped a 10-2 decision to the Portland Beavers.

In other league action, the Spokane Indians scalped the Salt Lake City Bees 8-2 and the Seattle Rainiers shaded the Phoenix Giants 5-4 in a 14-inning contest.

Heman, a lanky righthander who pitched for the Mounties in 1958, won his third straight in striking out one and walking one. Erv Palica, the loser, gave up eight hits, including Rudy Regalado's seventh-inning homer.

The last regulation no-hitter in the PCL came on Aug. 3, 1954, when the old Los Angeles Angels dropped the Portland Beavers 2-0. Bubba Church was the pitcher.

The Beavers got 15 hits in beating the Solons, who sent three pitchers to the mound in an effort to halt Portland. Joe Stanka, the Sacramento starter, was the loser. Howie Reed won it, giving up only seven hits in nine innings.

Jim Greengrass slugged out two home runs for the Beavers and Nini Tornay got another for the winners. Clay Dalrymple accounted for both of Sacramento's runs with a two-run homer in the second inning.

Max Surkont, the last of three Seattle pitchers, was the winner over the Giants. He came on in the sixth with the score tied 4-4 and gave up only five hits the rest of the way.
