Nazis Read Secret Papers, State Department Reveals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nazi Germany read secret U.S. State Department messages in 1941. Diplomatic papers discuss a German claim that spies picked up the messages.

Car Mishap, Three Hurt

Three persons were injured in a three-car accident late Sunday afternoon about one-half mile south of Tulelake.

The California Highway Patrol office in Yreka reported that a southbound car, driven by Earl Moffitt, 49, Tulelake, attempted to avoid a stopped vehicle in his lane and swerved into the northbound lane, hitting two cars, one driven by Lewis Gridley, 56, Portland, and another by Mrs. Violet Basesy, 23, of 4695 Denver Avenue, Klamath Falls.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gridley, 55, Portland, a passenger in the car driven by her husband, sustained multiple forehead and body cuts. Moffitt sustained facial cuts, and his wife, Lola, 45, received serious leg cuts and bruises.

All three injured persons were taken to Klamath Valley Hospital by Tulelake ambulance.

Moffitt was cited for driving on the wrong side of the road.

Ex-German War Prisoner Surrenders To Officials

CINCINNATI (AP) — "I never was a Nazi and never wanted to go back to Germany under any conditions."

That was the quiet statement in flawless English by a balding one-time German army officer, Lt. Kurt Rossmel, sought by the FBI for 14 years.

Rossmel, 52 and an expert linguist, said he faded into anonymity in Chicago and stayed there after escaping August 1945, from prisoner-of-war Camp Butler, N. C. He finally surrendered to the FBI here Sunday.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service holds a hearing today on his status.

The FBI turned over Rossmel to the Immigration and Naturalization Service, but he was released pending today's hearing.

A spokesman for the service said Rossmel cannot be charged with illegal entry into the United States because he was properly admitted as a prisoner of war.

The spokesman also said the statute of limitations may have run out on prosecution for Rossmel's escape from the POW camp in 1945.

At a German-American club here Kurt Rossmel told of his wanderings.

He said he had just returned from a Dutch East Indies plantation when he entered the German army in 1941.

"I was told that was the safest place to be," he said. "I was working in Holland when the Nazis took over the country. I went into the army as a private."

Rossmel said he was on kitchen police when a sergeant overheard him translating conversation between a Russian and a Czech.

"The next thing I knew, I was transferred to a language school in Berlin and a short time later commissioned a second lieutenant."

That led to duty as an interpreter in North Africa with Rommel's Afrika Korps. He was captured there.

Rossmel was at POW Camp McCain, Miss., for five months from October 1943, and then shifted to Butler.

"When the war was about over," he said, "I decided that I did not want to go back."

"I had received $20 a month as a POW lieutenant and had earned 80 cents a day doing extra work and thought I would use this money to escape with."

He made his way to nearby Danville, Va.

"I bought a new suit of clothes, shaved off my moustache and ditched the glasses," he said.

He headed straight for Chicago, took the name Frank Ellis and took the first of a series of jobs, including punch press operator.

barfender, waiter and elevator operator.

Ill health finally ended his shadow life.

"I'm suffering from arthritis," he said, "and was advised to move to Arizona or New Mexico. When I got to Cincinnati, I was broke and decided to give up running."
