Football Punted To, Fro Twixt Capitol, Library

WASHINGTON (AP)—College football is being punted back and forth between the Capitol and the Folger Shakespeare Library. The score so far adds up to 0-0.

Taking his stand for football is Rep. William Jennings Bryan Dorn (D-SC), onetime backfield terror of Greenwood, S.C., High School.

He has this to say in the Congressional Record: "We need more football and less sex education. It has been my observation that in those schools where intercollegiate football has been attacked and discontinued, there you will find a trend toward conformity, socialism, so-called intellectualism and extreme liberalism."

Now listen to another distinguished son of South Carolina, Dr. Louis B. Wright, director of the Folger Shakespeare Library: "Only in freshwater colleges do the students still believe that the chief purpose of college is to beat old Siwash."

"If it were not for some of the more thickheaded alumni, intercollegiate football would disappear overnight from many American colleges," he said. "(It) is as obsolete as the tail of the dinosaur. Every autumn it does more harm to the efficiency of American colleges than a plague of influenza."

Dr. Wright got off his blast in a speech at Wofford College, Spartanburg, S.C., where he spent his undergraduate years—and played basketball and tennis.

Dorn, who lists no college degrees in his Congressional Directory biography, blasted back a week later. He said Wright's speech was "most shocking to me as it came at a time when we are all becoming aware of the physical unfitness of our youth."

As for those who chase football off the campus—"They howl about academic freedom, yet exponents of the free enterprise system and states rights and men who believe in individual liberty are scarcely welcome on the campus."

Wright had a different estimate of the schools that pulled out of intercollegiate competition.

"Already the rah-rah boys are on the way out in the first-class places," he said. "One of the most distinguished universities in the South, Emory University, a uni-

CPA Chapter Nominates Officers

The Southern Oregon Chapter of Certified Public Accountants nominated officer candidates at its first meeting of the year, in the Willard Hotel.

Officers nominated were Leo D. Molatore, president; Tom G. Polk, vice president; E. G. Tischhauser, secretary-treasurer; and Fred H. Holmes, John D. Watkins and Glenn F. Schneider, directors.

No other nominations were received, so the men automatically will become officers at an election meeting next month.

"An Interesting Tax or Auditing Problem" was the title of a panel discussion conducted by Klamath Falls members B. K. Herndon, George Stacey, Tom Polk and Leo Molatore.

The panel illustrated a problem accountants have faced recently and how it was solved.

Next meeting will be conducted in Grants Pass June 4 or 5.
