How Cold Is Frozen?

FARGO, N.D. (UPI)—How cold is the "frozen" of frozen foods? Zero degrees or lower, says Ruth Dawson, a nutritionist at the North Dakota Agricultural College. Higher temperatures cause foods to lose their flavor and also melt their nutritional value, she said. If you don't have a thermometer to check your freezer, try checking the way it keeps ice cream. Ice cream stays frozen hard at 10 degrees or lower. If ice cream is soft, your freezer isn't cold enough. If you cannot hold the freezer down to zero or 10 below, buy and store only foods your family can eat within a few days, she said.

MISSION UNACCOMPLISHED

MONTPELIER, Vt. (UPI)—A city truck stopped suddenly while spreading sand on ice-covered roads to prevent skidding. A car behind it skidded into the truck, causing $300 in damages.

Yawn Leaves Her Open Mouthed

CINCINNATI, Ohio (UPI)—Jackie Smyth, 19, of Cincinnati, was walking to work one recent morning when she casually yawned. The yawn lasted three hours. Something clicked in Jackie's jaw when she yawned and her mouth wouldn't close. She went into a drugstore, but the druggist couldn't do anything. Clerks called police, who took her to Cincinnati General Hospital.

There, after three hours, a doctor was finally able to end the yawn.

STAR-GAZERS WANTED

NEW YORK (UPI)—It is estimated the United States has only about 50 astronomers capable of charting this country's future explorations into outer space. The shortage of these professional star gazers is so acute that industry is bidding up to $200 a day for celestial consultants.
