Love Story Lives Again in Chess

ONE OF THE most colorful parts of an annual festival in Marostica, Italy, not far from Venice, is a chess game in which the moves are made by live chessmen.

The costumed pageant re-enacts the centuries-old story of Rinaldo d'Angarano and Vieri di Vallonara, noblemen who had fallen in love with Lionora, daughter of the governor of Marostica. Opposed to the use of arms, the governor ordained that the issue be decided by a game of chess. Legend has it that Rinaldo lost, but later won the hand of Oldrada, the prince's sister, and everyone was happy.

The moves of the animated chessmen are determined in an actual game played through by the prince and princess of Marostica. Important roles in the pageant are played by well-known Italian stage and film stars. The spectacle attracts visitors from all parts of Italy and from many other countries.
