'My Old Kentucky Home' Typified By Shasta Ranch

By J. W. McKinney

Shasta Butte Ranch, two miles northwest of Mount Shasta, calls to mind the old song by Stephen Foster, "My Old Kentucky Home."

From the colonial-type house, six barns, and 15 paddocks, all painted white, to the bluegrass pastures, and thoroughbred horses, it is a picture right out of Kentucky. A look at it, and one can scent magnolias, and taste mint juleps.

Its 160 lush acres have always been devoted to raising racehorses. Waters from Wagon Creek keep steady streams of limpid water coursing down channels to all the many pastures.

Now owned by oilman William L. Douglass, Shasta Butte Ranch is the dream child of Dr. J. L. Patterson, a native of Lexington, Kentucky, and lifelong follower of the sport of kings. It was he who built the premises from bare ground to its present picture-book state. Here Dr. Patterson raised 39 horses that won major honors on all the big racetracks of North America.

Here, too, the present owner, Douglass, has raised two that are making their marks on American tracks, and has a half dozen promising yearlings that will soon be sold to racing men who know winning horseflesh when they see it, and study blood lines. Douglass has owned the ranch but a little more than two years.

Between the rule of Dr. Patterson and Douglass, another man, Jack Greenwell, owned Shasta Butte Ranch for a dozen years, but he was not a racing man.

Dr. Patterson developed the ranch in 1912. He sold it in 1945. A practicing dentist, his profession prevented him from taking time out for racing, so he consoled himself by collecting 10 per cent of all purses won by owners of stock he had bred. During the 33 years, that sum was enormous.

Today, Doctor Patterson acts in an advisory capacity for his long-time friend, and protege Bill Douglass. Together they will soon visit the selling marts and send another flock of Shasta Butte colts out to carry on the tradition that has been built up through the years.

This flock, like all the others, will carry the prefix Shasta. Shasta Maid, Shasta High, Shasta Low, and a host of others have carried the colors to the front in many a racing meet.

Tillamook Man Killed In Mishap

TILLAMOOK (AP)—A logging accident near here killed Ernest Newberg, 48, Sand Lake, Ore., Thursday.

A stump was unearthed and smashed down on the cab of a tractor operated by Newberg.

Ray Peazle, working nearby, ran, then returned to find Newberg on the ground beside the tractor.

Newberg was dead on arrival at a hospital here. Alan Lundberg, county coroner, said an autopsy will be conducted.

GOLD RUSH

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—A bulldozer breaking ground for a high school shattered a jar in which $20 in gold coins had been buried. All work stopped. Workers and spectators rushed for the coins, then scratched the earth for more. About 25 were found before the hunt finished and work resumed.
