

New Jersey Baton Twirlers Given Advice: Stay Home

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Seventeen girl baton twirlers, whose uniforms shrank to bikini dimensions, have been advised what to do during the Memorial Day parade—stay home.

The suggestion came Friday from Dr. Edward F. Kennedy, superintendent of schools.

The majorettes, pupils at West Side High School, had complained their 8-year-old uniforms had grown scantier and scantier due to repeated dry cleanings.

"Improper," said one of the girls.

"Immodest," said another.

"They have been altered beyond the possibility of alteration," said a third.

If march they must, the girls said they would do so in street clothes.

Kennedy was sympathetic but told the girls it is all right with him if they don't march at all.

"After all, this isn't Pasadena," he said.

The school head conferred for an hour with other officials. Then he announced he will consider making new uniforms an item in next year's budget.

An even firmer offer of help came from Samuel Sachs, chairman of the Veterans' Civic League.

He said his group is ready to buy $25 uniforms for the girls next semester, if the school approves. The League's aim: to get the girls in shape for the big Veterans Day parade next November.

Achievement Day Held

CRESCENT — The annual Achievement Day was held at the Gilchrist school on Friday, May 22, with students from grades one through 12 participating. The program was opened with the flag salute in a very impressive ceremony conducted by representatives of the Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts, Camp Fire Girls and Bluebirds.

The theme of the entire program was planned around the Oregon Centennial. A colorful grand march led by the first grade preceded songs and dances by the other grades.

A skit, narrated by Jim Samples, A Night on the Trail, with the following characters introduced each dance: Alta Wilkin, Karen Brownell, Linda Wyse, Dianne Norlin, Jim Larsen, Eric Erickson, Jim Traw, Vern Rocheck, principal, and Leslie Martin, coach, was the accompanist.

The dances were Indian War Dance, and Maypole Dance by the first and second grades; Dive for the Oyster, Pop Goes the Weasel and The Girl I Left Behind Me by third and fourth grades; The Little Shoemaker and Home on the Range by fifth and sixth grades; Tennessee Waltz and Rock and Roll by junior high and senior high.

After the program refreshments were served by mothers of second graders and everyone was invited to visit the classrooms, each having special displays on exhibition.

Four Automobiles Meet Altogether at the Same Time

A chain reaction at the corner of Main Street and Conger Avenue fused four cars into a unit that required two tow trucks about an hour to separate Saturday afternoon.

Klamath Falls police officers said the collisions happened when Mrs. Virginia Louise Badker of Klamath Falls stopped on Main Street to wait for traffic to clear so that she could turn left onto Conger Avenue.

Two other drivers, Roger Dean Ballard of 309 Washington Street, and then John Quincy Sailor of 2111 Orchard Avenue, who was driving a Hurry Cab, stopped behind Mrs. Badker.

Richard Paul Sumner, who lives near Oregon Technical Institute, plowed his small foreign car into the cab, police said. The four cars lunged forward about 28 feet and locked tightly together.

No injuries resulted, but the four cars were damaged to varying extents. Sumner was charged with following too closely. Mrs. Badker was charged with driving without an operator's license.

A pedestrian from Olene, Mrs. Marion Barnes, was treated at Klamath Valley Hospital and released Sunday afternoon after she was struck by a car driven by Cleve Michael Rutledge of 470 Denver Avenue, police said.

Mrs. Barnes said she was crossing Klamath Avenue at Eighth Street in a crosswalk when she was struck. Rutledge was charged with failure to yield right of way to a pedestrian.

Thomas Roe, 467 1/2 Boardman Avenue, complained to police that vandals broke, with a hammer or another heavy object, the windshield, one window, a parking light and the radio antenna of his car while it was parked on High Street between Seventh and Eighth streets Saturday morning.

A custodian at Klamath Union High School, Clement Rhoades, told officers three juvenile boys broke into the school through a window Saturday night and rifled a soft drink dispenser of $2, then fled.

Rhoades said he saw boys he suspects of the crime walking down a hallway. Since some students are allowed to work in school at night, Rhoades did not suspect the boys until he saw that one was carrying a three-foot crowbar. Investigation showed the dispenser's coin box was broken open. Rhoades called police, but the boys had disappeared when officers searched the building.

Ivan Eccles of Klamath Falls told police thieves stole a tank containing about 13 or 14 gallons of gasoline from his boat which was moored at Klamath Lake sometime between Friday evening and Sunday morning.

Mrs. Charles Putnam of 228 1/2 Martin Street told police someone entered her home through an unlocked porch door and stole meat from a freezer and coffee and preserves from a closet on her porch Thursday night. Mrs.

Importance Of Education Told By Labor Secretary

By JAMES P. MITCHELL, Secretary of Labor (Written for The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON (AP)—Within a few weeks about 1 1/2 million boys and girls will be graduating from high schools throughout the United States.

Some will immediately become members of the American labor force; others will be preparing themselves for additional training in colleges, through apprenticeship training and other educational programs. But, whatever their course of action, each of these boys and girls will in a very real sense be highlighting once again one of the critical problems of our time: the relationship between education on the one hand and employment and unemployment on the other.

We have been learning a great deal about the relationship between education and employment during the recent recession, from which, I am glad to say, we are making a very vigorous recovery. These past months have shown us again how important a good education and a skill are when the chips are down.

Look at the figures for this very last month. They show an unemployment rate among unskilled workers 2 1/2 times as high as the skilled worker. They show an unemployment rate among unskilled workers as much as eight times as high as among professional and managerial workers. These few figures tell better than a thousand words the story of the great importance of getting the best education and training possible in preparing for the world of work.

To those young people who are now receiving their high school diplomas, this story is particularly important. Because, while these graduates were completing their current senior term, about 800,000 of their colleagues were dropping out of school, to their very great disadvantage.

In a recent series of studies which we have just completed in the Department of Labor, the contrast in the employment and unemployment experience among high school graduates as against dropouts was dramatically illustrated. In a study of almost 25,000 young boys and girls, we found that the high school graduate got better jobs at higher pay. The dropouts experienced unemployment rates that were anywhere from 3 to 10 times as high as those of the high school graduates.

Thus, our urging young people to stay in school and get the maximum amount of education and training fits the economic facts of life.

The lesson that we have learned and learned again is important not only to the young people themselves but to the teachers and the counselors who work with young people.

I am concerned with the fact that as I travel throughout the country and attempt to point up the importance of a good education and a marketable skill, I am often met with the query, "Why do you keep urging us to advise young people to get the maximum amount of education and training when we find that we can't place some of our best people?"

It is true that there are some occupations and some skills and some areas where the going has been rough. But, let me give you an example of why I think education and training are so important.

Let us imagine that instead of the year 1959 we were considering this problem a quarter of a century ago — in 1934. Or make it 1935 or 1936. The exact year really does not matter.

And, let us say that we as teachers and counselors were visited by a young man with the interest, the talent, the aptitude, the motivation to be an engineer.

Now we know that at the time many excellent engineers were without any job at all — some of the lucky ones were driving taxicabs or working at filling stations.

How should we have counseled this young man? Should we have advised him in relation to the time and current economic situation? Or, should we have kept our eye on the long-range ball and counseled him in terms of en-

Ex-Sergeant On Way Home

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. (AP) — An ex-Army sergeant was on his way to his New York home today after being put on probation and receiving an unsatisfactory discharge from the service.

Sgt. Gerald Griffiths, 27, of Oriskany Falls, N.Y., was put on probation Monday by Dist. Judge Allan Walker. He had sentenced Griffiths to 3 to 25 years in prison on an armed robbery conviction April 20.

Griffiths was silent during his trial and declined to discuss the robbery. A close friend, Sgt. Richard Cowan, convinced Griffiths that he should tell his story.

So Griffiths then explained he had marital difficulties and that by committing the offense he had hoped to be discharged from the service, be put on probation and allowed to rejoin his wife. He said his wife left him because she did not like military life.

Walker placed Griffiths on five years probation and assessed $200 probation costs, payable at $25 a month.
