THE ONLY original Bohemian settler who still lives in Malin is William Halousek, right, seated. Joe Smidl, center, first ditchrider, died after plans for observance of the 50th anniversary of the founding of Malin were begun. Left is Alois Kalina, now of Portland, whose vision and community spirit guided continuing growth and development of the community. He was mayor for 25 years. He donated six blocks of the land he bought from the W. C. Dalton holdings to be used for the schools, a jail and the Malin Community Presbyterian Church. As the years passed he spent both money and time for additional improvements to the town.

Don't Build Near Stream

COLUMBUS (UPI)—Selecting a home site on a flood plain—the level area bordering a stream—is courting disaster, according to an Ohio soil expert.

T. R. Smith, soil technician with the Ohio Division of Lands and Soil, said flood plains are formed by sediments deposited by a stream that has overflowed. The presence of sediment indicates that the stream will flood in the future, he said.

"When considering building near a stream," Smith advised, "be sure that the site is high enough to be above the flood stage of the stream. Usually the type of soil present is a key to whether flooding takes place."

"If in doubt about a site that may be endangered by floods, seek advice from those with a knowledge of soils."

IN THE GOOD OLD DAYS.

Most of Milady's dresses were made at home . . . with her own hands. It was a rare treat to visit the Lady's Bazaar and choose a dress from the small selection available. Nowadays it is more convenient . . . and economical to drop in and choose from Miller's huge collection of fine dresses, suits, coats and sportswear. Miller's is proud that since 1902 we have been serving the well-dressed women of the Klamath Basin with the finest attire . . . at prices anyone can afford.
