Jr. Marshals Play Role In Fire Safety

NEW YORK (UPI)—Fire will kill more children under the age of 10 this year than polio did in its worst epidemics before the Salk vaccine, according to the National Fire Protection Association, which adds these grim statistics:

—At least 290 to 300 youngsters will die each month in fires that could have been prevented.

—Another 700 Americans will perish every 30 days in blazes which need never have occurred.

—Some 11,500 U.S. citizens can be expected to lose their lives in all fires this year.

One program aimed at helping to reduce this terrible loss of life enlists the organized aid of 8-to-10-year-old grade-school youngster who are learning fire pevention and safety at an age when it is most meaningful.

Four million of these "Junior Fire Marshals" took part this spring in a clean-up drive in towns, villages and cities throughout the country. The campaign was part of a year-long public service program sponsored by an insurance firm (Hartford Fire Insurance Co.) in cooperation with local schools.

Youngsters taking part — third, fourth and fifth-graders—opened their safety drive by attaching broom-shaped tags to doorknobs in their communities. The tags, prepared by the boys and girls themselves, give these five rules for springtime fire prevention:

—Dispose of winter accumulations in basement, attic, garage.

—Rake up dry leaves and weeds around the house.

—Burn trash only when the wind is not blowing. Keep a hose handy.

—Put lids on paint cans when the day's painting is finished.

—Store oily rags in covered metal containers.

But perhaps even more important than distributing these tags, the "Junior Fire Marshals" made sure that the advice printed on them was followed in their very own homes.

This Role Came Hard

TYRONZA, Ark. (UPI) — Wong Ming Moon, a 72-year-old retired businessman from the West Coast, spent 31 months growing a beard and fingernails up to three and a half inches long so he could look the part of a Chinese hermit.

The hermit is the leading character in a story called "The Recluse" which Wong himself wrote. He hopes to sell the tale to Hollywood and wants to play the leading part himself.

During a recent visit with his son here, Wong explained that he came to the U.S. from Canton, China, in 1922 and entered the import-export business in Seattle.

After retiring, he settled down in Ventura, Calif., were he spent two years writing his story—in Chinese. A friend translated it into English.

Wong said he grew the king-sized fingernails only "for fun" since they are not really vital to his story. He said they hinder him in only one respect—he can't untie his shoelaces and had to learn to manipulate a pair of large tweezers to accomplish that chore.
