

Legal Problems Posed In Case Of Earl Long

GALVESTON, Tex. (AP)—Questions of federal and Texas constitutional law are involved in a scheduled sanity hearing for Louisiana's Gov. Earl K. Long, one of his court-appointed attorneys said Wednesday.

Atty. Adrian S. Levy Sr. also said there may be developments before the hearing June 15.

He declined further comment, explaining it was not proper for him to discuss a client's case.

Levy said he and the other two attorneys appointed by Probate Judge Hugh Gibson to represent Long in the hearing may have a statement after a conference with the governor today.

That conference may answer the questions:

1. Whether Long will voluntarily continue treatment. If he does Texas law allows the sanity hearing to be canceled. If he refuses, the hearing must be held to determine whether he is mentally ill and should be committed to a hospital for treatment.

2. If a sanity hearing is held, whether Long will be represented by attorneys the court appointed. Texas law permits him to attend the hearing and to name his own attorneys.

The governor was flown here forcibly May 20 for treatment after a violent outburst before the Louisiana Legislature. After he gave signs of wanting out of the hospital, Judge Gibson ordered him committed to John Sealy Hospital at the request of Mrs. Long and the governor's cousin.

Then the question arose as to whether Long is well enough to make a decision on remaining in the hospital. This question presumably was discussed Wednesday at a conference of his attorneys and Dr. Titus Harris and other psychiatrists who have been attending the governor.

The attorneys also conferred with Mrs. Long, who has said she hopes to persuade her husband voluntarily to continue diagnosis and treatment.

Mrs. Long, writing in the current issue of Life magazine, said overwork and her husband's obsession with the idea of running for a fourth term caused his illness. She said she knew for eight months he was reaching the breaking point.

"They say that when Earl gets out of the hospital he will take his certificate of health and take it out on the campaign trail with him," she wrote. "Then he can say he is the only man in the race who can actually prove he is sane."

"The people will laugh and be happy again because they know he is the only man who really knows their wants and needs."

Exhibition Of PT&T Told

Pacific Telephone will feature "frontiers of the future" in telephone communications and research at its Centennial Exposition display, according to Manager T. W. Cole.

Continuous live demonstrations of direct distance dialing—something all Oregonians will be doing in a few years—is the exhibit's main attraction.

Free long distance calls to any point in the United States and Hawaii will be offered periodically as part of the direct distance dialing demonstration. The winner will use a plastic and aluminum vista-booth in placing the free call.

Telephone girls will also demonstrate other Bell Laboratories research developments. These include an electrical stethoscope, an electronic brain, human microwave beams and an electronic device capable of translating unintelligible sounds into human speech.

Visitors will see a full-scale model of the Vanguard-type satellites now circling the earth. In addition, they will see a demonstration of TV telephone with callers seeing themselves and the person at the other end of the line as they talk.

Another do-it-yourself exhibit will give visitors a chance to match wits with an electronic brain.

Road Commission Receives Bids

At its regular meeting June 10, the Oregon State Highway Commission will receive bids for grading and surfacing 4.91 miles of the Sand Creek-Silver Lake Road between the Klamath Indian Reservation and the Lake County line.

Plans call for construction of a cinder surfacing 28 feet wide. Later, a 20-foot wide oil mat surface over the cinder surface will be constructed by the county. The work is scheduled for completion in the fall.

Employment Law Changes Listed By Local Manager

Guy Barker, manager of the Klamath Falls office of the Oregon Department of Employment, listed changes in unemployment laws enacted during the recent legislative session in Salem.

The following changes will become effective July 1:

A single commissioner will replace the abolished unemployment commission. A State Advisory Council on unemployment compensation will go into effect. The agency's name was changed from the Unemployment Compensation Commission to the Department of Employment. An appeals board of three members will be created to hear grievances concerning agency decisions. New and larger penalties and increased interest due on delinquent taxes, or money due the department, will be assessed.

Workers filing for benefits will draw on wages earned during the first four of the last five completed quarters preceding the week in which they file. The worker's benefit year will consist of the 52 consecutive weeks beginning with the first week in which he files his first valid claim.

Workers must have worked at least 20 weeks, earning at least $20 weekly and at least $700 during their first or base, year of work in order to qualify for benefits.

Those who leave work because of marriage will be disqualified for four weeks subsequent to the date they quit work. Pregnant women will be disqualified beginning the week they leave work and ending six weeks after they give birth to their children.

If a worker has been discharged for misconduct, has quit without good cause or has failed without good cause to apply for or accept suitable work, he will be disqualified for benefits until he has worked and earned at least as many wages as his benefits would amount to in four weeks. Or he must satisfy the department that he has been able to work, actively seeking and unable to secure suitable work, and registered for work at an employment office during not less than eight weeks subsequent to the week in which he lost his job.

Employers Registration Date Slated

SALEM—Employers in over 20 occupational groups newly subject to the Oregon Workmen's Compensation Law must be registered with the Industrial Accident Commission before July 1, 1959, the agency warned recently.

Effective July 1, 1959, an employer whose business involves employment in the following occupations becomes subject to the Workmen's Compensation Law: service stations, garages, auto wrecking yards, junk and scrap dealers, restaurants, lumber loading, tree surgery, fence erection, well digging, machinery installation and dismantling, woodcutting, window cleaning, mechanical amusements, garbage collectors, forest fire fighting, exterior building cleaning, and land clearing. Also, if power driven machinery is used, bowling alleys and shops for the repair of cycles, boats and motors are also subject to the law.

An employer engaged in any of these occupations must register with the commission and either accept or reject the Act prior to July 1, 1959. No additional action is required of employers who are now registered with the commission for the above occupations.

If such an employer neither registers nor files a rejection before July 1, 1959, and has a workman injured, he may be liable to reimburse the Industrial Accident Fund for the cost of the claim.

Officers and directors of corporations, relatives of an individual employer, and relatives of a member of a partnership will become entitled to the benefits of the Workmen's Compensation Law on July 1, 1959, if employed on a wage or salary basis. This amendment eliminates the former requirement of a special election for these persons to become entitled to benefits under the Workmen's Compensation Law. All such elections now in effect will expire as of midnight, June 30, 1959. Beginning July 1, 1959, employers must include the actual earnings of these persons in their payroll reports to the Commission in the same manner as they report those of any other workman.

A special election may still be made by an individual employer or a member of a partnership for coverage as a workman under the Act, but a medical examination is no longer required.

Any employer wishing further information should write the State Industrial Accident Commission, Salem.
