State Officer To Visit Lodge

CEDARVILLE—Cedar Rebekah Lodge No. 306 of Cedarville, whose noble grand is Mrs. Charlotte Daschner, will be honored with an official visit on Thursday evening, June 18, by Mrs. Helen McFarlane, president of the Rebekah Assembly of California, Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Mrs. McFarlane and a number of her officers plan to visit the annual Rebekah Assembly of Nevada affairs in Reno on June 14, 16 and 17 en route to Cedarville.

The assembly president is a member of Alhambra Rebekah Lodge No. 292 of Martinez where she and her husband, John, and daughter, Johlene, live.

Mrs. McFarlane is well known to the members of District 49, which comprises the lodges of Adin, Alturas, Bieber and Cedarville, since she has visited the district on several occasions. On her most recent visit last August as warden of the California Assembly she conferred the assembly degree on 21 past noble grands of Rebekah lodges and seven past grands of subordinate lodges of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows during a special session of the Rebekah Assembly of California.

John McFarlane received the assembly degree at that time. Mrs. Lucille Suggen, member of Cedar lodge, is an appointive committee member of Mrs. McFarlane's.

DAISY DOUGLAS, membership chairman of Women of the Moose, Chapter 467, presided for Ruth Carr at membership chapter night on June 2 in the Moose Hall. Assisting her with the program were Ruth Carr and Marie Reis.

Rowena McDonald and Margaret Davies of the Ewauna Toastmistress Club gave talks on the Klamath County coin and the Oregon Centennial.

Elora Bagley was given a surprise handkerchief shower as a going-away gift from her co-workers.

Refreshments were served to 23 members following the meeting.

SANDRA HAAS was crowned worthy adviser of the Chilquin Assembly of Rainbow for Girls at installation ceremonies on May 23.

Rainbow Girls Install Officers

CHILQUIN—Oriental Gardens was the theme for the installation of officers at the Chilquin Assembly of Rainbow for Girls Saturday evening, May 23, at the Masonic Hall. Sandra Haas was crowned worthy adviser by Monte Dehlinger, master counselor, who with a sword bearing sextet all from Lost River Chapter Order of DeMolay, conducted the ceremony.

Sandra Haas is a junior, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Haas, Modoc Point. She is CHS student body secretary, a position she will retain next year. She was queen of hearts in 1958, president of the pep club, member of the drill team, of the paper staff, glee club, and the speech group. She replaces Claudia Heglund as worthy adviser.

Other officers serving are Diane Kircher, worthy associate adviser; Janet Hall, chair; Judy Stanley, hope; Linda Oates, faith; Sharon Davis, chaplain; Sharon Wilder, drill leader; Sharon Chase, love; Karen Jenkins, religion; Barbara Nicholson, nature; Jinny Lynn Doak, immortality; Barbara Davis, fidelity; Cynthia Martinez, patriotism; Karen Chase, service; Diane Haas, confidential observer; Helen Hescok, outer observer; Donna Robinson, musician; Kathy Hayes, choir director; Donna Kircher, treasurer; and Cherry Wolff, recorder-reporter.

Installing officer was Claudia Heglund; installing marshal, Louise Niehaus; installing chaplain, Eleanor McNamer. All three girls are past worthy advisers. Installing organist was Athel Roser and Myrtle Myers was installing recorder.

Mother adviser for the group is Dorothy Stanley.

In a clever addendum given by some of the group members Sandra's home life and friends were portrayed. An oriental theme was carried out in an addendum given by grade school students: Darrell Haas, David Plouffe, John Cox, Lawana and Bobbie Doak, and Ruth Wright.

Japanese lanterns hung from the ceiling, a grouping of oriental dolls was placed in the hall, wall hangings and table covers also carried out the theme. Beautiful arrangements of flowers were placed throughout the rooms and all the officers were given tiny fans by the new worthy adviser.

'Old Hand Tells What To Expect Of Wedded Life

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
NEW YORK (UPI)—Bound to happen during your married life: He'll learn to fix a leaking faucet.

You'll learn to change a tire. Children, all smarter, better looking, and better behaved than their cousins.

You won't laugh so hard at his jokes; he'll wonder why you talk so much at cocktail parties.

His pay raises won't keep up with the cost of living.

You'll threaten to go home to mother. He'll talk about enlisting in the Army. You'll kiss and make up.

He'll laugh at one hat he's paid for.

You'll wonder how you ever could have married "that" and try to make him over. You'll learn to count your blessings.

He'll be transferred soon after you've moved into the home of your dreams.

He'll wonder why it takes you so long to get dressed for church—or any place. You'll wonder why he bites his nails.

You'll notice he's glum around the first of the month. You'll try to spare him by hiding the department store bills—just once.

He'll wonder why he didn't "marry for money." You'll wonder why you married for love.

You'll kiss and end the wonderment.

Your "joint account" will register N.S.F. He'll try to force you to keep track of the checks you write. You'll open separate accounts.

He'll blame his first few grey hairs on marriage. You'll blame your first few wrinkles on him.

He'll forget to mail the Christmas cards. You won't remember to ask him about them until after New Year's.

Your friends will tell you marriage agrees with you "because you've put on a few pounds, haven't you dear?"

You'll forget his birthday. He'll forget yours—once.

He won't send you a Mother's Day card until you are one. You'll send him Father's Day cards—regardless.

When there's an argument, you'll always be right. He'll always be wrong.

But always you'll kiss and make up, proving your grandmother wrong when she told you: "The first 50 years of married life are the hardest."

They're just difficult.
