

BROWNIE TROOP 125 of McCloud recently entertained their mothers at a tea given in the elementary school. The program included several songs and a dance, "Hey Little Lassie." Following the program they were each presented with one year pins. A new member, Electa Mackay, was welcomed into the troop. Paris Revives

By NADEANE WALKER
PARIS (AP)—Hemlines and waistlines are coming down for spring 1959. Paris dressmakers are about to rediscover the female form, "as God made it," after seasons of fashionable distortions and exaggerations.
This is my impression after talking to some of the high fashion designers, who are already working on their top-secret spring collections, to be unveiled from January 26.
The hemline drop is unlikely to be a radical one, but it will cover the kneecap with a few inches to spare. As for the waistline, it will be back to normal, or nearly so. The high-waisted Empire line was literally run into the ground with the last fall season, when it blanketed not only Paris collections, but those of New York, Rome and London as well.
As Mme. Jeanne Carven, one of the few well-known women designers, puts it, "Skirts can't go any higher without becoming indecent, and waistlines can't climb further without strangling the neck. Besides there is always a change after the extremes have been reached."

With the smiling plea, "let's leave a surprise for January," she readily admits, "I personally am a partisan of the natural female form."

Like an echo, one of this fashion capital's newest designers — and its only South American — Serge Matta, says, "I find most women like their body as God created it."

Chilean Matta, who opened his house only last season, boldly admits, "I don't like the very short skirt as well as I did, and the Empire line is finished. It has already arrived in the streets, and that is fatal."

His private clients, he says, are already ordering form-fitting dresses. Nowadays, he adds, successful new lines are copied in ready-made right away, instead of the old delay of a year or two — and that means we must change styles more rapidly.

While the tip-top houses such as Dior and Balenciaga maintain the silence of the grave concerning new collections, strains in the wind indicate longer skirts and lower waistlines will be the majority trend.

Of course this never excludes the rebels who make Paris collections exciting enough to draw buyers from all over the world. Balenciaga, I predict, may stick to his short skirts and will launch at least one or two shockingly new silhouettes, while Chanel will certainly remain faithful to her classic suits.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATED

MERRILL — Paula Gail Harris, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Harris was fêted at her home on Friday afternoon, June 5, with a party. The event marked Paula's eighth birthday anniversary. Preceding the unwrapping of gifts, games were played with prizes awarded to Kay Thompson and Ginger McCullum. Centering the refreshment table was the cleverly decorated cake with pink and white frosting in the shape of a birthday present. A big pink bow topped the "package" with a fronting tag which read "To Paula." Birthday guests included Marlene Moore, Ginger McCullum, Vicki Chapman, Eileen Worch, Kay Thompson, Nancy Harris and Donnie Harris.

Woman's Club Seats Officers

PORT JONES—Initiation of new members and installation of officers for the coming year were the first order of business at the May 12 meeting of the Fort Jones Woman's Club.
Mrs. L. L. Lukes, president of the organization, reported that 20 new members joined during 1958. Following committee reports initiation ceremonies were held for the first time since the club was established in 1947. Mrs. Robert Banning, Mrs. Frank Barrett, Mrs. Paul Garrison, Mrs. Carl Johnson, Mrs. Gilbert Perkins and Mrs. Basil Wild were new members present who took part in the ceremony.
Mrs. Lukes, outgoing president, expressed her thanks to the Woman's Club for the cooperation she received during her term of office. She presented an electric utility card to the club as a token of her appreciation.
Mrs. Robert DeNure, president during 1957-58, presided as installing officer. Mrs. Lukes presented Mrs. James Stevens with the president's gavel and the president's pin as symbols of her new office. The retiring president then changed the position of the gold gavel on her own pin, signifying her status as a past president. Mrs. Frank Branson, vice president for the past year, presented Mrs. Michael Cross with the club year book, symbol of the vice president's office. Mrs. Robert Banning accepted the secretary's note book from retiring secretary Mrs. Louise Massa. Mrs. Robert Stone, who retains the treasurer's office for the second year, received the ledger and check book from past treasurer, Mrs. Joe Vardanage. Each new officer received a lovely corsage from Mrs. DeNure.

Plans were discussed for a clean-up day at the Fort Jones Museum May 27 in preparation for the June opening. As last year, the Fort Jones Woman's Club is undertaking the project of providing volunteers to work in the museum and keep it open to the public.

Canton Crater

The Ladies Auxiliary of Canton Crater No. 7, Patriarchs Militant, held a regular meeting on Thursday, May 28, in the IOOF Hall with President Helen McCormack in charge.
Officers of the day, Mildred Rexford, escorted and introduced members of the auxiliary who were newly elected and appointed at the association of Ladies Auxiliary Patriarchs Militant grand session held in Roseburg on May 18. The president welcomed and honored Lady Frances Munsell, newly elected vice president of the state; Lady Vera Fritsch, appointed as chaplain, and Lady Jona May Wells, appointed as left aide to the vice president, all of whom were installed and will serve the Oregon association for the coming year. The auxiliary was also honored this past year by Harriet Estes as officer of the day and Mae Anderson, right aide to the past president for the association meeting. Vera Fritsch represented the auxiliary by being chosen to give the response to the welcome address.

Helen Blanas, delegate to the association meeting gave a report of the session with accounts of the Decoration of Chivalry ceremony and experiences of the trip to Roseburg.

During the business meeting the auxiliary voted for a dispensation request to recess during the months of July and August. President Helen was delegated to present a wreath for the Memorial Day services at the shaft. Plans were also discussed for fall meetings when a reception for the honored officers will be held and the official visit of Lila Holmes, state president.

Refreshments were served in the dining room where tables were attractive in the Centennial motif, featuring covered wagons and cleverly dressed clothespin dolls. Mildred Rexford, Mary Pope and Lucille Wirtz served on the committee for this social hour.

At the previous meeting of May 14, officers and members conducted a memorial service for Ivy Drew, draping the charter in her honor. Drill practice was resumed by drill captain Frances Munsell, and all members were urged to come and participate if possible. Isabel Foster and Kate Hogue were welcomed on their return after both had been confined at home after surgery.

Refreshments were served by Kathleen Hepburn, Martha Baker and Helen McCormack from tables decorated with May baskets and flowers in purple and yellow, the colors of the auxiliary.

Plans Told For Nuptials

GRENADA—Wedding bells will ring on Sunday, June 14, at the Yreka Methodist Church, when Maxine Page, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Page of Grenada will exchange nuptial vows with Charles E. Hurley, son of Dr. and Mrs. Jere Hurley of Yreka.

The bride-elect has been teaching at the Jackson Street School for the past two years. She acquired her education and training in Oklahoma, attending Geary High School in Oklahoma, and is a graduate from Oklahoma State University, where she was a member of Chi Omega Sorority.

The bridegroom-to-be, who recently opened a law office in Yreka, attended Yreka schools and graduated from the University of California and Hastings Law School. He just completed four years of service as an officer in the Navy Air Force, having received his release last January.
