Future Stars Not Easy To Spot

NEW YORK (UPI)—How do TV directors recognize acting talent in-the-rough? Sometimes, confesses Robert Stevens, they don't.

When Stevens was directing TV's Suspense series about a decade ago, his casts included such youngsters as Grace Kelly, Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward, Jimmy Dean, Rod Steiger and Jo Van Fleet.

"It was impossible to say at that time that any of them would be the big stars they later became," said Stevens, who himself went on to win an Emmy award in 1957 for his work on the Alfred Hitchcock Presents series.

The best prospect for stardom, Stevens recalls, was Paul Newman. "He had the good looks and the talent, but he was still just a beginner. He took direction well and learned quickly. I guess he was the best prospect."

The late Jimmy Dean? "Dean seemed to me to be very ambitious and intense, but he didn't strike me as being a very good actor. That just proves how wrong I was," Stevens added.

Grace Kelly? "She was amazingly good when you consider how attractive she was. What I mean is that usually the beautiful girls can't act their way out of a paper bag. But Grace had good acting training, was very ambitious and always a lady."

CALL ME MAGGIE

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Marjorie Lord, a star of the Danny Thomas show, says she hates her name and would prefer to be called Maggie. "I think 'Maggie' has more allure," she said.

Stevens thought Joanne Woodward would become a fine actress. "But I had no idea she would go on to win an Academy Award," Rod Steiger was Stevens' perpetual "heavy." He always worked as a "bad guy." "Today, Steiger is probably the best 'heavy' in the business," said Stevens.

Jo Van Fleet was one of the director's favorites. "She was and is a truly fine actress who really knows her business. I have great admiration for her."

County Says No To Road

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — Almost every community in the state wants to be on "Interstate 61," a new east-west superhighway to be built in Virginia, but not Albemarle County.

Albemarle consists of lush, rolling countryside which its citizens fear would be marred by a busy, modern road.

The State Highway Commission recently received a petition signed by 1,592 residents of the county saying they don't want any part of the superhighway.

"I urge that the state flower not be changed from the dogwood to the concrete cloverleaf," said spokesman John Rogan. He warned that a highway through Albemarle would spoil the traditional fox hunts, horse shows and garden club activities.
