Maine Woman 'Doing Fine'

FORT KENT, Maine (AP)—Doctors at Peoples Benevolent Hospital said today that Mrs. Helidore Cyr, 48, and her 27th child are "doing just fine."

The child, a seven-pound, five-ounce boy, was born last Sunday, two days after Helidore Cyr, 52, and his wife, Marie, had celebrated their 31st wedding anniversary.

The couple live on a 400-acre farm at Ledges, New Brunswick, with 14 children. Five are married and residing elsewhere. Seven of the children have died.

GINGER BELL, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Bell, Klamath Falls, is running for queenship of the Tulalake Junior Rodeo and the Intercollegiate Championship Rodeo due in the Basin during July. She is 14, and a sophomore at Klamath Union High School.

'AUDREY' VICTIMS SUE—SHREVEPORT, La. (UPI)—Survivors of some of the victims of hurricane Audrey in 1957 have filed nearly 10 million dollar damage suit against the federal government. They charge the U. S. Weather Bureau did not warn residents of the low-lying Gulf Coast area of Cameron, La., in time for them to get out. About 300 persons died in the June 27, 1957 storm.

PEA-PICKER PEEVED—JOLIET, Ill. (UPI)—Prisoner Joseph Alexander, 28, climbed to the top of an 80-foot water tower in Stateville Penitentiary Tuesday and sat down. He came down several hours later and said he'd just got tired of picking peas on his work detail.

$3.5 Billion Aid Slate Okayed By House Solons

WASHINGTON (AP)—House approval of a $3.5-billion-dollar foreign aid authorization could mean operations at about the present level for another year, the program's supporters said today.

But because actual money must be provided in a separate appropriation bill later, the amount available after July 1 could be much less.

The House voted Thursday night—271-142 for a $3,542,600,000 program slanted toward economic loans and partly away from military and economic grants.

Much legislative cutting and patching lies ahead, but Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Thomas E. Morgan (D-Pa.) said he thinks the pattern of the final program probably has been set.

The authorization the House voted for the year beginning July

1 is close to the actual appropriation for this year—$3,448,092,500. It is $96,800,000 less than President Eisenhower asked. But it is still more than some House members, including opponents on the Appropriations Committee, say they will support when it comes to voting actual funds.

The Senate has yet to act on its own version of the authorization bill, with which the House measure eventually will be compared. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has voted a $4,165,000,000 authorization subject to Senate action.

Morgan, whose committee recommended 190 million dollars more for loans than the House finally authorized, said the outlook is for a higher figure when the inevitable compromise is reached with the Senate.

Both the House and the Senate committee bills emphasize the economic side of the program and announce preference for loan grants. Both call on the executive branch—the Senate version in more peremptory language—to come up with a plan for getting away from economic grant aid.

Eisenhower recommended 700 million for the Development Loan Fund, designed to help underdeveloped countries get hard-to-finance projects started. The House committee, trimming his recommendations in other categories, recommended increasing the loan fund allocation by 100 million. The House went along with the cuts but rejected the increase by a 164-86 vote.

The Senate committee bill would provide an average of one billion dollars a year for five years in loan money. Unlike the House bill which would require appropriations, the Senate measure would let this money be borrowed under a standing permission from the U.S. Treasury.

Morgan said he thinks this method of financing has no chance of House approval and that he personally opposes it. House Appropriations committee members oppose what they call this "back door financing" system.

Some well placed observers said the ultimate compromise might call for a long-term authorization for the Development Loan Fund at a somewhat higher figure than the House set but following conventional appropriations procedure.

Fear, Loneliness, Regret Followed Flying Bandit

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—On the eve of his entry into prison, flying bank robber Frank Spreng gave a hint of what life was like during the months when, all alone, he matched wits with scores of law officers trying to track him down.

He warned anyone following his example to "be prepared for three very close companions I've had—fear, loneliness, and regret."

The 29-year-old Spreng, a master of deception whose escapades won him a place on the FBI's list of 10 most wanted men, appeared humble and contrite before Judge William H. Victor Thursday.

He said he had been selfish. "My parents—very good people—are now ashamed to walk down the street," he said before the Summit County Common Pleas judge sentenced him on six charges. Spreng had pleaded guilty.

Spreng is one of two sons of an Akron couple who both work. The other brother, Lawrence, likewise has a police record and has served time in the state penitentiary for carrying concealed weapons.

"This has hurt me very much. . . I have been stripped of all the rationalizations and justifications I built up around these (crimes)," Frank Spreng told the judge.

Judge Victor sentenced him to terms ranging from 1-5 years to 10-25 years on three counts of car theft, two counts of armed robbery, and one count of breaking out of Summit County Jail. All sentences are to run concurrently with other state sentences Spreng drew at Hamilton, Ohio, where he robbed a bank of $23,953 last March, escaping in a stolen plane.

Spreng broke out of jail here April 16, 1958. FBI efforts to catch him, stepped up when he stole a plane at Toronto, were intensified after the bank robbery. Spreng was captured in Mexico April 13 after a plane he was using had cracked up.

Spreng's attorney, Ralph Felver, said he thinks Spreng "could get out on parole in 8 years and 4 months," with state sentences running concurrently with federal sentences.

Judge Victor indicated this was a surprise to him. He thought Spreng would have to serve state and federal sentences consecutively.

Spreng goes to Atlanta, Ga. Federal Penitentiary tonight.
