Trade-In For Homes Urged

MARSHALLTOWN, Iowa (UPI) - The housing industry is missing a good bet by not making it as easy for the home owner to trade in his old house as a motorist does his automobile, according to electronics manufacturer John W. Norris.

Norris isn't sure exactly how this can be done. But he said the need is so great, there is bound to be a way and it's up to realtors and bankers to find it.

Norris is president of Lennox Industries, Inc. His primary interest in easier trade-ins lies in the belief that many persons would move to more expensive homes as their incomes increased if it were simpler for them to dispose of their old houses.

This, in turn, would help boost the sales of electrical appliances such as air conditioners and automatic dishwashers.

But Norris also pointed out that easy trade-ins would help the increasing number of American families who are being transferred from one part of the country to another, and must dispose of their homes in a hurry.
