Governor Brown Ruled California Legislature

By JAMES C. ANDERSON
SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The dominant figure in the 1959 session of the Legislature was Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown. The 53 year old chief executive, in office only six months, figured strongly in almost every major achievement recorded by the Legislature.

He suffered some stinging defeats, too, particularly in the final hours of the session when a strange coalition of Democrats dedicated to organized labor and a solid bloc of Republicans in the Assembly killed his bill to set up a "code of ethics" for labor unions. Brown came into the office last January with a reputation of being a genial, smiling, hand shaking Irish politician. Privately, some of his supporters in the Legislature expressed doubts whether "Pat" had enough executive leadership to sell the lawmakers his program for "responsible liberalism."

But at the end of the six month session, there wasn't a man in the capitol who doubted Brown's ability or leadership. In fact, he put so much heat on the lawmakers that Joe Shell, Republican leader in the Assembly, complained the governor was using "Huey Long tactics."

Surrounded by a team of able and practical politicians and blessed with a 47 to 33 Democratic edge in the Assembly and a 28 to 12 break for his party in the Senate, Brown piled up an impressive list of achievements.

Perhaps his greatest victory was in healing the wounds of five bitter years of north-south strife and winning Assembly and Senate approval of his water program.

If voters in the 1960 election approve, the state will launch a $1,750,000,000 water construction program.

On another front, the governor scored an unquestionable victory for what he calls "fiscal responsibility" by getting 85 per cent of his $236,000,000 tax program through both houses.

He stepped into the governor's office facing a state budget deficit estimated at about $200,000,000 by mid-summer of 1960.

He had to fight every inch of the way, but Brown finally got through a $215,000,000 tax program which will put the budget in "shaky balance" next year.

Brown called it a "balanced" tax program because it hit both big business and the consumer.

One of his infrequent defeats, however, came in the tax battle. Oil interests succeeded in convincing an Assembly committee and it dumped the governor's bill to levy a $28,600,000 severance tax on the extraction of oil and natural gas.

As for his program for "responsible liberalism," the governor got the four bills he wanted most, although he lost almost all of his labor report proposals.

From a national standpoint, and Brown seems well on his way to becoming a man to be reckoned with when Democrats choose a presidential candidate in 1960, legislative approval of a fair employment practices act was a big victory.

He also succeeded in abolishing cross-filing, which Democrats have been after for years.

Added to the list of Brown victories were bills dealing with air pollution, narcotics, highway safety, installment racketeering and narcotics.

man hasn't got what it takes. Even our Declaration of Independence, which is perhaps the greatest document in world history, hedges on that point. It says merely that all men are CREATED equal.

Anyway, Huey Long, flying on the wings of his magic slogan, was soaring to unbelievable heights when his career was cut short—as is the case so often with despotic demagogues—by an assassin's bullet. Where he might have gone if he had lived no one yet is prepared to say.

This much is certain—He wouldn't have gone very far in the direction envisioned by our Founding Fathers.

This much let us hope—That here in our mythical State of Jefferson—which, we proudly proclaim, is a State of Mind—we never reach the point where we tolerate supermen of the Huey Long type.

Huey Long had glamor—loads of it. But history teaches this clear lesson: TOO MUCH GLAMOR is a dangerous thing.

Shark Kills Cause Study

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI)—City and county officials, noting a decrease of swimmers at beaches, today sought means to protect swimmers from sharks which are expected to continue to appear near beaches.

Mayor Charles Dail said he had instructed the city manager's office to start a study as soon as possible so that any remedial action could be taken to protect summer tourists from man eating sharks which have been lured to coastal waters by warmer water temperatures.

Robert Dent, chairman of the county board of supervisors, said he felt the investigation should have a high priority. A fellow supervisor, David Bird, said that the current matter would cut into the current time consuming supervisors' problem budget consideration.

"But I think this matter is very worthy of consideration," Bird said. "At this time we do not know if shark nets are the answer. However, we must protect the public."

Dail said cost of nets had not been determined. He said he would press for action to determine the most feasible protection for the general public and tourists on San Diego area beaches.

The shark fear was set off eight days ago when a 20 foot killer shark seized a husky, experienced skin diver, Robert L. Pamperin, 33, about 120 feet off a crowded beach. His body had not been found.

Since the incident there have been several sharks sighted near Southern California beaches. Another skin diver, Albert C. Kogler, died after being attacked by a shark May 7 in the San Francisco area.

Scientists at Scripps Institute of Oceanography at nearby La Jolla said a general temperature increase in West Coast water has been registered in the last two years. There is no indication when or if the readings will return to normal.

Gridiron Star Is Fire Hero

ROME (AP) — Former football star John Sims (Shipwreck) Kelly —robbed in kelly green — rushed American and European tourists from an early Sunday morning hotel blaze that took three lives.

"To everyone he was the man in the green bathrobe—the man who did most to get the guests out of their rooms," said Charles M. Gilman of Gilman, Conn.

The ex-footballer at the University of Kentucky, now 49, made repeated trips back into the hotel to warn other guests and help them out.

He himself said he "didn't do anything but wake people up" after hearing the screams of hotel maids as they jumped or fell from the top story of the five-floor Ambassador Hotel on Rome's famed Via Venet.

The dead and two injured were employees of the hotel.

Although some of the guests managed to pack their bags before fleeing to the street, a few slipped into the first thing they could grab. Kelly's wife, the former Carol Henon of Boston, donned a plaid bathing suit.

The Kellys are on a European vacation. Kelly was divorced from former glom deb Brenda Frazier in 1956 after 15 years of marriage.

Identification was made from papers in the wallet.

A 14-year-old son of the couple received third-degree burns in the early morning blaze and was taken to the Portsmouth Naval Hospital.

The victims were identified as Cindr Daniel Grant Bailey, about 39, stationed at New London, Conn.; his wife, Betty Carter Howell Bailey, 26, formerly of Miles, Va.; and their two daughters, Melissa, 8, and Virginia Page, 3.

LAKE ARROWHEAD (UPI) — Governor Edmund G. Brown's commission on metropolitan area problems plans to make smog the first target of its work.

The commission, which closed a three day study conference here Sunday, also pledged close cooperation with state legislature committees and with city, county and district governmental bodies.

Dr. Malcolm H. Merrill, director of the state department of public health, led a discussion on smog before the commission. He was one of 12 experts called to brief the commission on metropolitan area problems.

Merrill outlined plans to establish pure air standards under recently passed legislation. He warned that air pollution control will be costly and that a minimum of pollution is unavoidable.

"It then becomes important to estimate what sort of pollution may be present without producing adverse effects on health or unreasonable economic loss," he said.

San Francisco attorney Charles Dunaway, chairman of the commission, said at the close of the meeting that probably three more meetings would be held this year. One in September would be to establish cooperation with local governments and two later would start direct work on the smog problem.

Robertson, retiring assistant secretary of state for the Far East, said he doubted that the Peiping regime could be overthrown unless its army rebels.

But he added "it is not at all visionary to hope that this unrest may get to the point that the army might well go over to the side of the people."

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee made public over the weekend censored testimony which Robertson and others gave in closed sessions during the last two months.

Wagon Train Pushes West

KEMMERER, Wyo. (AP) — As the Oregon Centennial wagon train pushed on west today, one member of its party was ill and another had left by train for home.

The oldest member of the party, 86-year-old wagon driver Weaver Clark, was hospitalized briefly here Sunday for treatment of tick fever.

However, doctors said he was not seriously ill. And at Clark's insistence, he was returned to the cauldron. He planned to spend the next few days in a bed in one of the wagons.

The man who left the train Sunday to return to Oregon was Lowell Blair, 62, of Sheridan, Blair left to rejoin his wife who is being treated for an asthmatic condition.

Mrs. Blair was forced to return home from the wagon train a week ago.

Sunday night the wagons camped at Old Immigrant Crossing on the banks of the Green River, 40 miles northeast of here in the middle of the Little Colorado Desert.

The party left Independence, Mo., April 13 on a 2,000-mile-plus trip to Independence, Ore.

Phone Group Given Boost

PORTLAND (AP)—A new contract was agreed upon Sunday, giving wage increases to 600 employees of the Pacific Telephone Co. in Oregon, Washington and Idaho, a union official said.

The 15-month pact calls for pay increases ranging from $2 to $5 a week, said John Lappin, business manager here for the Order of Repeaters and Toll Test Boardmen.

The union is an affiliate of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

The new contract will boost the top pay bracket to $120 a week, Lappin said. It now is $115.

The Sunday agreement capped several weeks of negotiations. Lappin said members of the union will start voting at once on whether to accept the agreement.

In addition to the wage increase, Lappin said, workmen in Pendleton, Albany and Corvallis were given a higher pay classification.

Drive Results Below Quota

ALTURAS — The blood drive, sponsored last week by the local Elks lodge, collected a total of 150 pints, according to Chet Brown, drive chairman. The Red Cross Bloodmobile visited Alturas and Cedarylle over a three-day period.

The results were below expectations, Brown declared, adding that something must be done "to instill the spirit of donation among local residents."

Brown pointed out that the demand for blood is increasing. Last week the Elks were called upon to release two pints of blood to Des Moines and since June 1 a total of nine pints has been released.

Attorney General Urges Collection Agency Shift

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The State Division of Collection Agencies takes orders from the industry. It is supposed to regulate. Attorney General Stanley Mosk charged today.

Mosk said, in a report to Gov. Edmund G. Brown, that the division had glossed over law violations by bill collectors and intimidation.

The attorney general urged the governor to sign a bill transferring control over the division from the secretary of state's office to the Department of Professional and Vocational Standards as a step toward correcting the abuses.

Brown ordered the attorney general to investigate the division after a state Senate committee charged that bill collectors were committing open violations of the law with the apparent tacit approval of the division.

The attorney general's report, compiled by Assistant Attorney General Clarence Linn, claimed that the administration of the division "has been pointed to the protection of the (collection agency) industry."

Linn found that the present law regulating collection agencies "does little to protect" the general public, but rather spent most of its time helping collection agencies out of various legal scrapes.

The report claimed that the division arranged settlements which permitted collection agencies to escape prosecution for embezzlement. In at least one case, the attorney general said, the head of an offending agency was employed to work out the settlement.

McCloud Tax Goes On Ballot

McCLOUD—The Board of Trustees for the McCloud Union Elementary School district is appealing to the voters of McCloud, Chiloquin, Kinston, Bartle and Pondosa to turn out a record vote Tuesday for the purpose of increasing the local revenues for school district operation. Polls will be open from 1 p.m. until 7 p.m. at the McCloud Elementary School and at the Pondosa Community Hall.

The issue to be decided is one of raising the local tax from 90 cents to $1.35 in order that sufficient money be available for the operation of the district. Because of variations in state apportionments which are based upon attendance and assessed wealth, the state allocations have diminished but the local income has not increased sufficiently to offset the difference. The district cut back over $16,000 last year and finds it necessary to cut back another $12,000 this year unless the local income is not increased.

These lowered revenues mean that several services will have to be curtailed: speech correction, nursing, services to handicapped children and an additional loss of a regular teacher.
