Diets

By FLORENCE JENKINS
While researchers continue the argument over what elements in our food add to the retention of fat in the bloodstream, it was interesting to read in the Wall Street Journal last week that one big segment is all in favor of more starch in the diet.
Starch, these researchers contend, is broken down into usable form for the body more slowly than some other elements and does not tend to slow the fat-burning processes and therefore does not assist in the addition of harmful fatty particles.
Potatoes, cereal grains and rice have taken quite a beating since modern woman (and man) decided to be skinny. Consumption of potatoes, for example, dropped from 146 pounds per capita to a new low of 107 pounds per person per year. Statistics fail to reveal any resultant drop in killing diseases.
Man has been eating starchy foods practically since the beginning of time.
Rice is believed to have been the earliest crop cultivated by man after he advanced beyond the root foraging stage. First reference to its cultivation appears in Chinese writings of about 5,000 years ago.
About 95 countries grow rice, including the United States. The world's main source of rice is still Asia, which produces more than 90 per cent of the annual global output of 190 million tons. There are several thousand varieties of rice.
Rice flourishes under a wide range of conditions. Apparently it is given enough sun and water. It will thrive in the poorest soil and go on doing so for generations.
Rice is involved in an untold number of Oriental legends. For centuries the Chinese believed that rice cooked with the seven classical herbs of the East would cure all diseases and ward off death itself.
Thirteen American states are rice growers and the nation became particularly rice-conscious during World War II when the Western world was cut off from most of Asia's great rice bowl. When American surplus rose to more than three billion pounds, experts began developing new uses for rice. They used it in beer—as the Japanese had been doing for years. They put it in breakfast cereals, cocktail crackers, baby foods, soups and flours. They even tried it experimentally in building bricks.
New uses have had to be found for potatoes, too, because of the skinny fad and the prevalence of the fallacious idea that potatoes are fattening.
When Americans get back to eating starches again, a lot of our surplus can be utilized as honest to goodness food again. And without surplus poundage on the average U.S. citizen, too.
There might even be a drop in the average cholesterol count, too.

deep in 400 million tons of water. Many people still firmly believe an elephant drinks through its trunk. It doesn't. It uses its trunk as a straw—to suck up the water, which it then squirts into its mouth and swallows.
Our quotable notables: "A woman," says actress Paula Hill. "Prefers a man with a will of his own—provided it's made out in her favor."
Some folks do love us. Fifty two per cent of Italians, asked in a newspaper poll what nationality they would prefer to be if they were not Italians, responded, "I don't know." But the second largest group—27 per cent—said they would like to be Americans.
A great to-do is being made in some quarters, about the dangers in kissing. But the American Medical Ass'n's Journal says, "there is only one chance in 500 that the girl or boy you might kiss will have a disease which can be transmitted by osculation."
The giving of presents to one another has become a major industry in the United States. We now give an average of 50 gifts a year each. Maybe we need a national give-nobody-nothing day.
Ain't it the truth? "When a husband buys his wife flowers," says singer Dorothy Shay, "he's usually trying to throw her off the scent."
How easy can life get in the automation age? A new vending machine now dispenses a carton of 12 squirming worms for fishermen.
U.S. public schools are more crowded than ever. But 13 out of every 100 American children still attend private primary schools.
Marital dilemma: Did you hear the one about the world's most frustrated women? She found a letter she asked her husband to mail six months ago in a coat he had left home for her to sew a button on.
It was Alexander Woolcott who observed: "Many of us spend half our time wishing for things we could have if we didn't spend half our time wishing."

bers. The insurance payments after a failure come from funds the members have paid in—and not from the U.S. Treasury.
When a bank fails those who get paid off are depositors—whether they have checking accounts or savings accounts.
When a savings and loan group fails, those who get payments are shareholders, not depositors. They actually own a part of the business, and it is their share of ownership that is insured.
How long do you have to wait for your money if a bank or a savings and loan association fails and the FDIC or the FSLIC steps in?
The American Bankers' Assn. says bank depositors will get theirs almost immediately. FDIC says in most cases the delay has been just a few days.
The longest delay—so far—has been three months in the case of three Chicago banks folding in 1953. FDIC explains that this was because Illinois law at that time (since changed) allowed the state superintendent of banking to close banks for investigation, and FDIC's hands were tied.
The U.S. Savings and Loan League says no shareholder has been delayed in getting insurance payments.
Both the Home Loan Bank Board, which rides herd on FSLIC, and the National League of Insured Savings Assns. say that—so far—shareholders have never had to wait longer than over a weekend.
The U.S. Savings and Loan League points with pride to speed in the most publicized default, that of the Commonwealth Building & Loan Assn. of Norfolk, Va., in 1956.
Its trouble arose when it found that a big-hearted spinster employe (Minnie Mangum) had embezzled nearly three million dollars over the years to lavish on friends.
On a Friday when the stricken association was still meeting withdrawal requests, the FSLIC moved in, transferred all accounts to another association, so that shareholders were able to get their money on Monday morning if they wished. The League says most didn't withdraw funds.
But what would, or could, happen if there were a rush of failures—although (thing seems less likely at the moment?)
In some states banking supervisors have the power to impose a waiting period before savings accounts (as apart from checking accounts) can be withdrawn. If they did so, many depositors might have to wait.
Shareholders can be required to give 30 days notice of intention to withdraw from savings and loan associations. They haven't had to wait—so far—but they might have to some time.
And it could be possible for a faltering association to number all withdrawal requests and honor them on a wait-your-turn basis, paying off no more than $1,000 to any shareholder each time around. This could push final payment far into the future.
Both the bank and association insurance agencies insist that long before any of their members got in that bad a fix they would have moved in to protect depositors or shareholders.

relatively weaker than the others, but the remaining four (chlorpromazine, prochlorperazine, trifluoperazine and perphenazine) were not different from each other in therapeutic effectiveness.
All five drugs were superior to a control substance (phenobarbital) against which they were tested.
Improvement of severely ill mental patients in the 34-hospital study included alleviation of emotional and thinking disturbances as well as generally improved behavior. Specifically, patients became less resistive and belligerent and their thinking became less disorganized.
These changes were reflected in discharges from hospitals and in a decrease in the amount of nursing care required.
Complications from use of the drugs were neither frequent nor troublesome among the more than 600 patients included in the study.
The five different tranquilizers and phenobarbital were administered during the latter part of 1958 to a total of 640 schizophrenic patients in the 34 cooperating hospitals over a period of 12 weeks.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK
Q—I was recently examined by a doctor in connection with reinstating my GI insurance, but neglected to send the examination report to VA. Will the report be acceptable to VA if it is sent in late?
A—The report should have been sent immediately after the examination. If the delay has been more than five days, you must submit a statement that you are in as good health as when examined. If the delay has been more than 31 days, VA cannot accept your late report. You must take another examination.

D. A. Salary
Klamath Falls (To the Editor)—There is an old saying that silence is golden, but when the local newspaper remains silent on an important misuse of the taxpayers' money, I can only ask why?
I have reference to the proposed county budget increase of the district attorney's salary to $13,200. To date nothing has been in the paper that I have seen. To me this is outrageous. Should this amount be passed in the budget, it would make the local district attorney the third highest paid official in the state—surpassed only by the governor and the justices of the Oregon Supreme Court. This salary is more than is paid to his boss, the attorney general, the circuit court judges, or the district attorney of Multnomah County, who has some 15 courts in his jurisdiction.
I thought the tax money was quite tight—this was given as the reason for not having the second circuit court here in Klamath County. I realize that in the last session of Legislature, a bill was passed to increase the district attorney's salary to $10,000 per year so that it would not be necessary for the district attorney to enter into private practice. Why does Klamath County feel they need to supplement this with $3,200? Just how many attorneys in Klamath Falls, have a net income of $13,000?
News is news, and information is information, but it surely seems to me that the fellow that pays the taxes should know where his tax money is going. If the D.A. is worth this amount, let's have a news story on the front page with headlines. One thing for sure, we will have the highest paid D.A. in the state and that should be news. What has happened to your reporters?

Insurance
By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst
NEW YORK (AP)—Insurance of bank deposits and savings and loan shares is now a 25-year-old commonplace of financial life.
And—so far—neither agency that takes over for deceased institutions has suffered much loss. Nor have depositors or shareholders—so far—had to wait for their money longer than local laws dictated.
The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. celebrated its silver anniversary, last year. The Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. observes its birthday June 27.
Each agency insures accounts up to $10,000 each.
Both agencies can pay off accounts in defunct institutions in cash or move the accounts to other insured institutions.
The FDIC has more than 13,000 banks insured and they have built its resources up to nearly two billion dollars. So far it has had 436 cases to deal with and its losses have come to about 29 million dollars, or about 1 1/2 per cent of its cumulative gross income.
The FSLIC insures 3,900 savings and loan associates. It has had 38 insurance cases with a total loss of 5 1/2 million dollars, or less than 2 per cent of its cumulative gross income of 224 million dollars.
The associations, like the banks, pay for the insurance—just as you pay for any insurance you may have.
Although set up by the federal government and supervised by federal agencies, the two corporations are owned by their mem-

Living Longer
By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:
One of the hardest things in the world for a man to do is to outlive a woman. Twice as many women as men now live to be more than 100 years old.
The plumbing in your body is more complicated than that in the average city. You have more than 100,000 miles of arteries, veins and smaller blood vessels—all dependent on a heart the size of your fist.
Nutrition note: Only 24 of the 350 known types of shark find human beings particularly appetizing.
A survey showed that only a third of today's teen-agers earn their own spending money.
Americans should be getting smarter. Despite the decline of TV quiz programs, they spent nearly 200 million dollars last year in the purchase of encyclopedia sets.
The major gripe of most secretaries is that their boss leaves the office without leaving word where he can be reached. Other secretaries complain, "I don't care where he goes—if he'd just go more often."
Pianos have about 7,500 parts. More than the average automobile.
Today's best quip: Robert Q. Lewis of CBS says he doesn't know whether rock 'n' roll music is dying—but it sounds like it is.
Parents worry most about their teen-age daughters. But statistics show that a son is four times as likely to get into trouble as a daughter. Tell that to the old man, Sis!
The average rainfall for the earth is 32 inches a year. If it fell all at once, we'd all be thigh-

Today is Monday, June 22, the 173rd day of the year, with 192 more days to follow in 1959.
The moon is approaching its last quarter.
The morning star is Saturn.
The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter.
On this date in history:
In 1851, fire destroyed 500 buildings in San Francisco.
In 1940, France signed an armistice with Germany, in the presence of Adolph Hitler.
In 1941, Germany invaded Russia.
In 1942, the post office sent its first "micro-film" "V mail."
In 1942, the nation's worst race riot in 25 years came to an end in Detroit as federal troops took over. Thirty-four persons were killed in the three days of rioting, and at least 1,300 persons were arrested.

Daring Father Rescues Infant
NEW YORK (AP) — A father jumped from the attic window of his burning house Sunday with his one-year-old daughter in his arms.
He landed 15 feet below on the roof of a one-story extension. Then he dropped the child to a man among the spectators below. The father jumped and landed safely on a grassy spot.
Robert Reynolds, 31, and his daughter Barbara were treated for burns, but were otherwise uninjured.

Five widely used tranquilizing drugs tested simultaneously in 24 Veterans Administration hospitals have been found effective in treating schizophrenia, a major mental illness which fills more than half the hospital beds in the United States, the VA announced recently.
Hospitals at Roseburg and American Lake participated in the study.
One tranquilizer (mepazine) was

The Almanac
Today is Monday, June 22, the 173rd day of the year, with 192 more days to follow in 1959.
The moon is approaching its last quarter.
The morning star is Saturn.
The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter.
On this date in history:
In 1851, fire destroyed 500 buildings in San Francisco.
In 1940, France signed an armistice with Germany, in the presence of Adolph Hitler.
In 1941, Germany invaded Russia.
In 1942, the post office sent its first "micro-film" "V mail."
In 1942, the nation's worst race riot in 25 years came to an end in Detroit as federal troops took over. Thirty-four persons were killed in the three days of rioting, and at least 1,300 persons were arrested.
Thought for today: The French author Montaigne said, "Nothing is so firmly believed as what we least know."
